beginning (bi-gin'ing), 1. The point at which something begins: START 2. the first part 3. ORIGIN, SOURCE 4a. a rudimentary stage or early period — usu. used in pl. 4b. something undeveloped or incomplete.

Everything has a beginning, like songs, recipes, projects, yearbooks, and school years — even though they don't begin at the traditional January 1.

Many practices and meetings of fall sports and activities started the year. Of course, for the new students, the year began with sophomore orientation, where as well as learning the school song, sophomores received the legendary razzing from the juniors and seniors.

As the year got under way, class officers were elected, yearbooks were sold, and dues were collected. From the sports angle, the year brought a new beginning. Denfeld combined its swim team with Morgan Park. Although a definite first, it became just the first step in combining the schools completely. Our football team became city champs and the boys' varsity cross country team went to State.

Six new teachers came to Denfeld last year: Sharon Hexum, Don Langlee, Dave Bartel, LeeAnne Clauer, Pat Phillips and Beva Wunderlich.

Denfeld claimed 938 students; the senior class contained 338, the junior class carried 313 and the sophomore class dropped to 287.

The beginning of the year held great promise. It drew Denfeld Hunters on through the year. Events kept their interest. Students created the excitement.

Foreign exchange math teacher Brian Hodgson, from Australia, was very demanding, but popular and well-liked.

At one of the last hockey games to be played against Morgan Park, Denfeld skated to a 9-2 victory over the Wildcats.

What's Right With Denfeld?

Break is too short, the day is too long, there's too much homework, lockers are too small, and there are too many rules.

These seem to be the everyday complaints of a student. But what seemed to be the most popular complaints were the school's new regulations. As the students returned for the new school year, they were faced with six new rules. One said every student must carry an ID card. This rule was developed to stop intrusion of students from different schools. Several students compared this new experience to that of a prison or army.

A ten-minute homeroom period was added which meant taking five minutes out of the time for break in order to make up for the time lost. This left only ten minutes for break.

Mandatory homeroom seating was required at assemblies in order to maintain full attendance. This restriction was a problem for those who enjoyed sitting with friends while viewing the assembly.

Another rule restricted anyone going up on second or third floor during the lunch period. This was to eliminate trash being left in the halls, to cut down on noise, and to avoid possible vandalism.

The final adjustment which seemed to be the hardest to get used to was having six report cards instead of the usual four. This was changed to be consistent with school district policy. Six grades allowed students an opportunity to achieve better grades.

The exterior of the building also underwent changes. The roof, for example, was full of countless leaky spots. Below these areas you could always find a bucket or two catching water dripping in a steady rhythmic beat. Doors and windows were replaced to conserve energy.

So what's right with Denfeld? The many changes indicate the desire to grow in the right direction.

Hall duty for teachers Mr. Paul Lampi and Mr. David Nyholm involves checking student ID cards and passes.

Drip, drop, drip, drop is what this roof used to do before it was repaired. The roof has a new coat costing $40,700.

"We're from Denfeld, couldn't be prouder!" Would Morgan Park students be willing to say the same?

The final decision came on December 15, 1981 at a Duluth School Board Meeting: Morgan Park Senior High School will be closed in June 1982, and the students will attend Denfeld. West Junior High School will also close. Those students will go to Morgan Park which will then be completely junior high.

This decision resulted after a battle between hundreds of spirited and outraged students and some practical school board members. Morgan Park students argued that the size of their school did not affect the quality of their education in any way and in some ways was even an advantage.

Many students felt as if the majority of the board was paying no attention to them. Board members contended that there will be an increase in educational opportunities when the two schools are combined into one large group. In a December 3, 1981 issue of the Duluth Herald, board member Mary Ryland stated, "Morgan Park has a tremendous spirit. I hope that spirit won't be damaged, and I don't think it has to be."

Apparently the board recognized that Morgan Park had special vitality and spirit, but hoped it would be transferred to Denfeld rather than lost.

Morgan Park's football coach Kyle Inforzato, estimated that 80 percent of the students were involved in at least one extracurricular activity. It was also true that Morgan Park had the lowest dropout rate of all high schools in Duluth.

A very solemn setting surrounds Morgan Park School which will no longer hold senior high students after June 1982.

"Save Morgan Park Senior High" is prominently displayed on this billboard in Morgan Park.

Showing off their collection of school memories to Patty Baker are Mr. Mil Kurich, principal, and Mrs. Betty Heg teacher. The black arm band signifies the school's mourning.

Must Unite

One school board member, Fred Fox, resigned before the December 15 meeting because he felt he was outnumbered by members who had made up their minds far in advance. He was quoted in the Herald: "I don't think bigger is better. New buildings aren't the solution."

After the decision was made, plans to remodel Morgan Park Senior High were brought out. A

$1.1 million project was drawn up to improve such departments as music, industrial arts, science, and home economics by September 1982.

One good point coming out of this controversy may be that Denfeld will finally get its much-needed new gymnasium, locker rooms, and remodeled classrooms. However this depended on many things, such as the possibility of a bond issue, and most importantly, the financial picture posed by the Board of Education. The estimated cost of a new gym was $3,700,000. In addition, funds will be needed for code upgrading on stairways, new windows, an elevator, and barrier-free safety features throughout the school. The total proposed cost was over $5 million.

This year's planning paved the way for many changes next year.

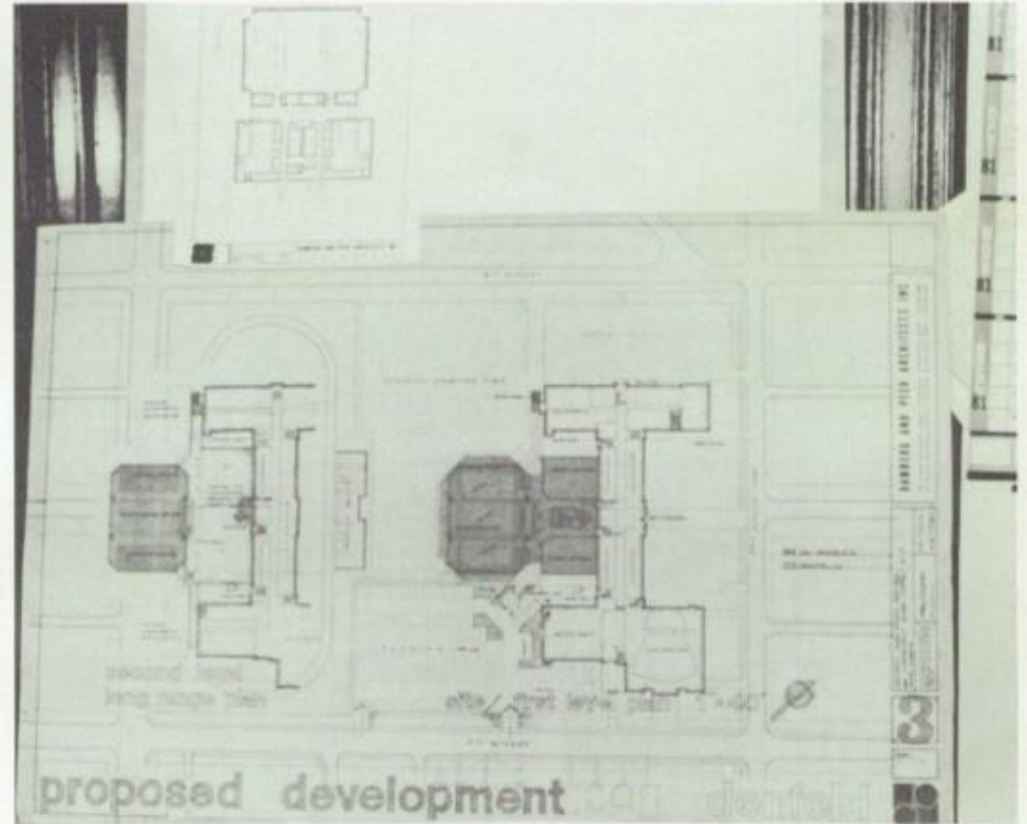

Changes don't necessarily have negative connotations. "I think there's going to be a lot of problems at first when we merge," Sophomore Elise Peterson remarked. "But hopefully Morgan Park and Denfeld can all be one united school." With this idea in mind Denfeld faced the coming year. Perhaps in time there will be a group of Wildcat Hunters!

Growth vs Decline:

Q: What starts in Laredo, Texas, runs through Kansas City and Minneapolis, and ends in Duluth??
A: It's I-35, but will it end in Duluth?

Questions about Duluth's economic future as a city received pessimistic responses. As a mild recession slumped into a full fledged recession, it directly affected many students. Looking for a job often ended in failure. With the cost of gas, clothes, and higher education ever-rising, students felt the crunch.

The recession directly affected many industries in the area. During the latter months of 1981 and early months of 1982, many employees of Minntac Corporation were laid off with no promise of going back to work. Management of Minntac as well as Reserve Mining and Erie Mining stated the reason for the lay-offs and shut-downs was the lack of demand for domestic steel.

Many employees of the Duluth Air Force Base also found themselves jobless or transferred when it was decided that the base would be moved to Ohio. Several students were directly affected by this decision since their parents either had to transfer or find some other employment. The battle by local and state legislators finally produced results in December. An alternate mission to repair the aging fleet of US f-4 fighters was secured. Although the mission did not replace all jobs that were lost, it was a beginning. Another mission was also sought.

Duluth faced another loss in 1982 when Jen's Inc. announced plans for moving its pizza manufacturing operations out of the city. Efforts to locate three alternative production firms for Duluth were made by this company.

abolizing the conflict over the use of orted steel, the pillars of unfinished ge rise lonely out of the bay.

Scheduled for closing in early '82, Jeno's pizza production plant, located on the bay, employs many residents who will be forced to find other jobs.

Continuation of the freeway through downtown Duluth became an issue once again. Although it was agreed that the freeway would continue, there was no specific date set for completion. To make room for the extension, Krenzen Auto Inc. made plans to construct a new auto-mall just a few blocks from their present location. Replacing the adult book stores with the auto-mall served a dual purpose. It rid the downtown area of a controversial problem as well.

Another controversial issue of the past year involved the construction of the new Arrowhead Bridge. Construction, which was desperately needed to replace the old wooden structure, had begun in 1980 but was halted in 1981 over a dispute concerning the use of imported steel. Using domestic steel would enhance our economy, but imported steel would cost less. The latter was chosen and many believed it would lead to further collapse of the local economy. Construction resumed in December 1981 with a scheduled completion date in 1984.

Although the past year showed more decline than growth, many businesses still found room for expansion. The demolition of the downtown Glass Block store opened the way for St. Louis County Federal Savings and Loan to build additional facilities. Expansion of Western National Bank into the former Ben Franklin store next door also began. Duluth Mayor John Fedo proposed an International Village which would provide an outlet for foreign countries to display and sell items from their countries. Since Duluth is a port city, several countries could be represented.

In the recreational field building also took place. In early January decisions to increase the number of participants for Grandma's Marathon were made. Six thousand entrants could sign up before the contest scheduled in June. Long distance runners from around the country compete in this grueling race.

Expansion versus decline — this phrase described not only the affairs of the country but Duluth as well. Our city exhibited its own economic victories and defeats.

Images of the Year

Was the world on the brink of disaster? On March 30, 1981 John Hinkley, Jr. fired at the President and others. Press Secretary James Brady received a serious head wound which may prohibit any future return to his duties. President Reagan escaped with a chest wound which kept him hospitalized for weeks.

An attempted assassination of Pope John Paul II followed. On May 13, 1981, Mehmet Ali Agca shot and wounded the Pope while he rode through St. Peter's Square. After several week's recovery, he returned to the Vatican.

More violence came. While viewing his troops, Anwar Sadat was murdered by military dissidents.

Each incident seemed to indicate a world wide assassination plot. These shocking incidents shook the world. Grief and violence continued.

Strikes and food shortages battered an already troubled Polish people. Russia pressured Poland into using troops to suppress the striking miners and leaders of the Union Solidarity. This military action further aggravated relations between the U.S. and the Soviet Union. By Christmas it was apparent that the Polish Solidarity's attempts to raise wages and the standard of living had backfired. Many people in America feared for the lives and well-being of family and friends in Poland.

In the midst of world unrest and tragedy, The Royal Wedding, an extravaganza of romance and delight, captured the hearts and fantasies of millions of people.

Great Britain's Prince Charles and Lady Diana married on Wednesday, July 29, 1981. This fairytalelike story symbolized hope and beauty to many in a troubled world.

At home tragedies of a different nature made headlines. Two skyways in Kansas City's Hyatt Regency Hotel collapsed. The Hyatt disaster killed 113 and injured 186. However other victims were found. Several survivors and workers still suffer mental anguish from their experiences while cleaning away the wreckage. In addition to the fires in major Las Vegas hotels, this incident left people questioning the safety of such buildings.

Highly popular, Rubik's Cubes are found everywhere much to the dismay of teachers.

This national craze was founded by Erno Rubik who calls his cube a sport and a piece of art.

Legendary rock music star Mick Jagger, lead vocalist of the Rolling Stones, goes on tour in the U.S. All concerts sell out.

Another headliner in 1981-82 was the weather which drew the coldest temperatures in a century. Temperatures hitting record lows caused frostbite, accidents, and deaths. On January 13 an Air Florida Flight leaving Washington crashed into a bridge on the Potomac. Iced wings were blamed for this disaster.

The second launching and successful landing of the Columbia, although troubled by a fuel-cell problem, brought a new aspect in the future of space flight. Reagonomics, a term coined for Reagan's economic policies, caused cutbacks in many government programs. Cuts in education, decreased benefits in social security, and curtailed food stamps caused many changes in American lives. One such budget plan decreased Duluth's educational aid 11.4 million dollars.

News highlights in our home state featured the closing of the Metropolitan Stadium in Bloomington, Minnesota, site of many pro-football games. The Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome in Minneapolis replaced the twenty-five year old structure.

Students showed increased enthusiasm through greater numbers being involved in high school activities. The Minnesota State High School League reported 57,557 students participated which is an increase of three thousand over 1980.

The Nuclear Energy Commission enraged many Minnesotans when areas in the state were tested for uranium waste disposal sites. Several sites as close as Cotton brought angry Duluthians to their feet.

In a year in which the biggest news came from the barrels of assassins' guns, the return of U.S. hostages from Iran after 444 anguish-filled days received only brief notice. Perhaps because of the severity of bad news, more people chose to view the Royal Wedding than any other single event. Perhaps, too, this indicated the need for more hopeful future.

ORGANIZATIONS

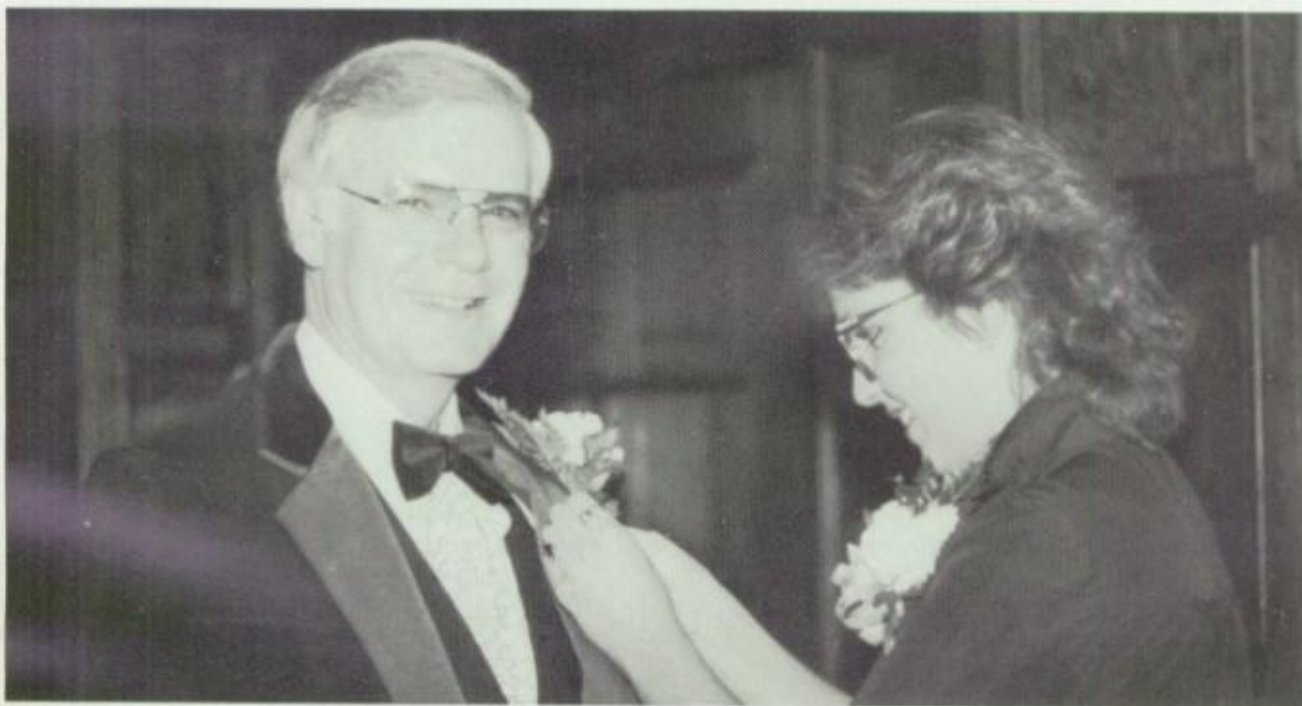

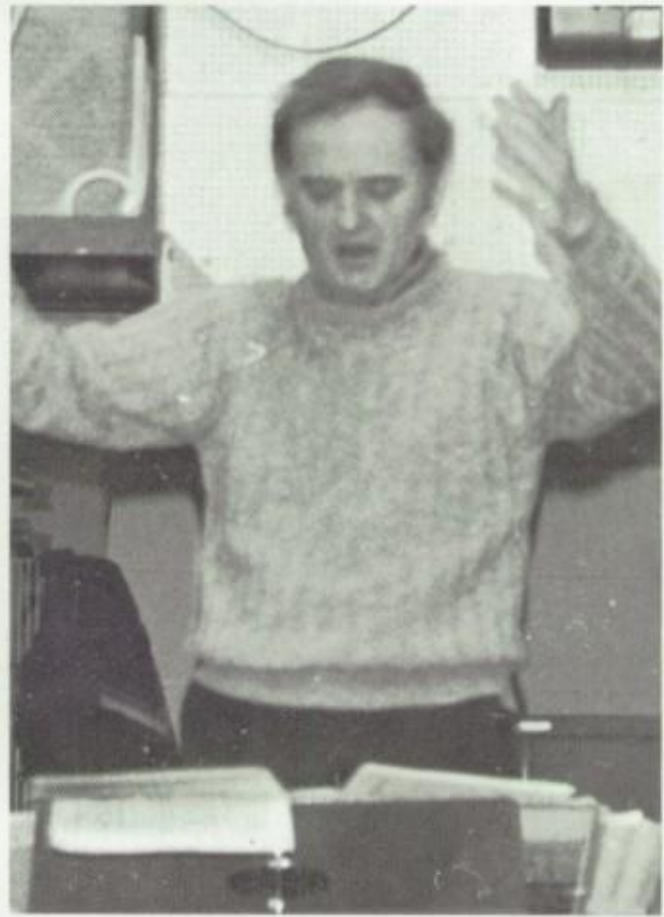

What gave students and advisers reasons to unite to form the 33 various organizations at Denfeld? Reasons varied as much as the organizations themselves.

Each organization had goals — a glue that held it together. Some of these goals were: to provide entertainment like a cappella, stage band, and orchestra; to find career opportunities like OEA (Office Education Association) and DECA (Distributive Education Clubs of America); and to support the school like DAFA (Denfeld Athletes for Action) and FCA (Fellowship of Christian Athletes).

Each organization, regardless of type or purpose, needed drive and determination to make their goals attainable. They practiced, researched, rehearsed, performed, served, and struggled. But it was not all work. It included opportunities for meeting others and for exploring one's capabilities.

When that director, adviser, or coach yelled, "Okay, this time I want your best," or "Smile! Let the people know you enjoy this," or "Let's take it from the top," that is exactly what the group did.

They may have started out as individuals, but with guidance from a determined leader they organized — they became a group.

The Sound of Music

Under the direction of Mr. Ray Baker, Denfeld has three choirs. The Ray Baker Singers are a group of sixteen students with melodious voices. R.B.'s, who were picked from the A cappella Choir, performed at a variety of places in the community.

A cappella Choir was made up of seventy-eight harmonious members. A slightly smaller group, the Sophomore Choir, contained about sixty members.

Practicing was a must for all choir members in order to gain approval from their audiences at the Winter Concert and Spring Concert. Most members helped with fund raising. The money earned through candy sales, magazine subscription sales, and raffle tickets payed the way for the annual A cappella Choir trip.

Absorbed in the music before them, Randy Helland and Doug Friebe keep the steady bass beat.

They all sat in the dull, clammy practice room with their instruments in hand. The room had no windows, just four dark walls. The door was locked and sealed tight with the keyholder on the other side. There was no escape.

No, the orchestra members were not physically locked in a practice room. Each member actually chose to devote the time he spent just for music.

Stewart Apps said, "I practice four hours a day. I practice in the bathroom at home though. It has better acoustics."

After Brian LaFlair, senior bass player, was asked how many hours he practiced, he smiled sheepishly. "Can I count the hour of practice with the orchestra?"

Whether they practiced their assigned hours or just fifteen minutes, they all knew that old saying, "Practice makes perfect."

Musical experiences highlighted this year. One of the first took place when some of the orchestra members attended the U.M.D. String Clinic.

Three concerts held throughout the year followed: the Winter Choral/Orchestra Concert, the Winter Pops Concert, and the

Sharps and Flats

Bands Are Sharp . . . but Funds Are Flat

NO DOUGH, NO GO described in four words the situation the music department faced.

That problem not only affected the concert band and stage band, but the orchestra and choir as well. Lack of money created a poor situation.

Until 1980, the band took yearly trips to the Minnesota Regional Music Contest held at various locations. "Students really look forward to going on these trips," said band director Gerald Klun, "but what can we do if we haven't got the money?"

Mr. Klun came up with alternatives that could aid the bands with their money problems.

One suggestion involved receiving rental money for both school instruments and marching uniforms.

Mr. Klun preferred a cooperative plan with the athletic department. "We will raffle off one thousand dollars provided by the Booster Club," said Klun. "We can make money on every ticket sold."

In the midst of financial troubles, the band members still looked forward to giving its two yearly concerts — one held in the fall and one in the spring. In addition, the stage band attended the annual Head of the Lakes Jazz Festival held at UMD. Jazzbands from all over the state enjoyed this competition.

Speech and Debate: Alternatives

To meet the demand for varied curriculum choices, speech and debate became alternatives to English. Shyness, stuttering, and mental blocks were some of the problems that speech and debate teachers, Mr. Dave Gorden, Mr. Tom Stolen and Mrs. Sue Stolen, helped students overcome.

Due to the large numbers of interested students, the speech and debate teams have been going strong for many years. Competing in city and state meets all members had chances to meet new friends.

Expressing his feelings about the mistakes one can make, Scott Magnuson sticks out his tongue.

"Speech is lots of fun and a great way to meet new friends," said Tammy Henry.

By spending hours of toil, work, and concentration, the speech and debate team accomplished a great deal, including improvements in school work.

First year speech and debate members were called Novii's or Keinbombs; when asked why, Pam Yearly replied, "It's an inside joke involving one of the old debaters who graduated last year."

Nicknames for the teachers were formed by all members: Gurp — Mr. Stolen, Mommy Gurp — Mrs. Stolen, and Davey — Mr. Gorden.

Three Cheers for Cheerleaders

Picture an event without cheerleaders. The pep wouldn't rate very high. The spirited, yet somewhat rowdy, squad always kept the support and encouragement going especially when students were down.

Early in the summer girls started each morning with practices, making up new cheers, and reviewing old ones. Carrying spirit to all the away games became possible because of their planning.

Remember particularly the rating of a kiss at a pep assembly? Little did each football player know it was his own mom he kissed. This needed planning only the Cheerleader could devise.

A conflict evolved this year when funds were cut. Cheerleaders, Flagtwirlers, and Pom Pom Girls had to pay a ten-dollar fee. When asked where these funds went, squad captains received only evasive answers. Because they did not use the showers, towels, or any of the equipment, these groups felt this fee charge was unfair.

Inspiring Spirit

Applause, Applause

The Flagtwirlers and Pom Pom Girls performed many appealing routines at assemblies and sporting events. Many summer mornings and after-school hours spent perfecting and polishing routines showed through their superb performances.

Although they experienced nerves and jitters before performing, a smile was always there.

The Pom Pom squad one early October morning boarded the bus and headed for Brainerd. This was their first experience in competition. With hair pulled back, made up faces, and pom pom's in hand the girls did their thing. Being third to perform they didn't really get a chance to see the accepted style of performance. But having learned from their mistakes, the girls hoped next time to change their style and luck.

Girls' Club Gleams

At first nothing seemed to go as planned, but the Girls' Club Cabinet soon united as one. As Terri Martineau, president of the Cabinet put it, "It's hard to be a group. You have really got to just hang in there."

Activities spearheaded by the Girls' Club included Sophomore Initiation and Teacher Appreciation Day, and many more with the help of their new adviser, Virginia Nelson. The girls found that they were better able to plan all meetings and decorating days in a more orderly fashion.

Car washing funded decorations for the Couple's Dance and the Christmas Party. The girls not only engaged in just school activities, they also had pot-luck dinners at various members' houses and participated in a car caravan across town and back.

Interest in the club also brought about the purchasing of sweaters, which may start a new trend for the Girls' Club.

Striving for completion, Adviser Virginia Nelson lends a helping hand to cabinet members in decorating for the Couple's Dance.

Pyramid Power

solemnly posing is Sam Kirby (vice president) and Mary Hable (president).

Once again, Pyramid proved to bring about many contributions to our school and its various organizations. They raised funds for the United Way, as well as for AFS. The concession stand at football games was their primary means of raising money along with selling pens.

Pyramid's activities included, Maroon and Gold Week plus a dance after the football game.

President Mary Hable summed it up, "Many things were very successful, but improvements could have been made."

Cadets

They Gain Experience and Credit

When was the last time you spotted a cadet struggling to get a TV set down the hall? Or when did you last see a student delivering messages or passes? Students formed a large working force in school. The library, offices, or audio-visual rooms couldn't have functioned as easily without their cadets.

"I became a library cadet because it's an easy credit and I like the quietness," stated senior Veronica Smith. When asked about the jobs he performed as an AV cadet, senior Randy Helland replied, "We mostly delivered and collected films from teachers and figured out who got what films and equipment."

Cadets as well as staff, made the school run efficiently. When asked if this job offered helpful experiences in a future career, Senior DeAnn Cossin explained, "I doubt if much of this could be used as training for a career, but I'm going into law enforcement and I'm sure there will be filing to do."

Power Board Provides Color

Remember the last time you saw a group painting at the end of the hall? Or the time you thought you saw a swarm of bumble bees, and had to look again? "Who were these people?" you asked. It was Denfeld's active Power Board members, who always kept busy.

Organizing the pre-season football banquet and planning for the Hi-Day dance and assembly had to be done during those very treasured last days of summer. Selling garters and baked goods, washing cars, and planning the all-important Homecoming dance accounted for their time.

But these ambitious students didn't stop there. Drawing and painting locker decorations and posters became a daily, after-school responsibility for each member. In order to keep everything running smoothly, weekly meetings were necessary.

Power Board experienced having a new adviser, Mr. John Arola, who contributed some very clever and helpful ideas.

Contrary to many beliefs, Power Board was not for girls only. Artistic abilities, school spirit, dedication, and loads of ambition were attributes Power Board looked for.

To promote spirit and sportsmanship, the Denfeld Athletes For Action sponsored a Run to Hibbing. Thanks to Dave Johnson's mother, they had a mobile home for the guys to travel in when they weren't running.

"DISCRIMINATION!!!"

The guys screamed it again, "Discrimination!" Frustration caused them to form their own group — Denfeld Athletes For Action, or DAFA. Raising money to help defray costs in the athletic department became the group's main goal. Promoting sportsmanship and establishing a better reputation for male athletes followed.

As their adviser, Mr. Tom (Dukes) Knutson kept the group organized. DAFA sponsored several events: First came the car smash at the Union tailgate party. Next came a Run to Hibbing where eight junior varsity cross country runners took five-mile shifts, carrying the team-autographed ball to their field. They raised an astounding $1800 in pledges in that run.

Several girls felt that this group discriminated against female athletes. But nothing stood in the way of forming a similar organization for girls only. As Mr. Knutson stated, "We live in an age of total equality — and that is good. But sometimes it can be carried a bit too far."

DAFA provided new activities and a chance for the males to prove their school spirit in their own unique way.

STAGEHANDS: Mr. Don Langlee, Kevin Tomlin, Reid Thompson, Chris Opheim, Ernie Beitel, Mike Ellis, Mike Fechner, Kevin Brouse, Janet Sorensen.

Challenges Help Students Expand

Mentally, physically, and morally - students face challenges each day.

FCA, (Fellowship of Christian Athletes) helped students to expand through their challenges. Students got together to discuss a variety of things that could help them grow spiritually.

Two other challenging positions were being a PA announcer and stagehand. Whether the announcements came in poetic form, everyday speech, or in a melody, the news brought by the PA put a smile on faces. "We try to do the announcements as cheerfully and accurately as possible without being too silly," stated Mr. Gordon, adviser to the PA announcers. We heard 24 different voices; four each grading period.

A stagehand's job was never done. One stagehand had to be present at any event held in the auditorium. Each stagehand was capable of setting up and working the microphones, operating the spotlights, controlling the light board back stage, and lowering or raising the screen. Six people comprised the working crew. Working with others became the most challenging job. Every large production depended greatly on this group of students.

PA announcers are caught once again with their mouths open.

Best

Business Education Service for Teens came into existence during the 1978-79 school year. It was started because of an order from the Affirmative Action and Title IX office of the Duluth schools. The Junior Rotarian program wouldn't have been able to continue if a similar program hadn't been started for girls.

Since the women of Duluth didn't have an organization that met every week they came up with a different idea. Sponsors of BEST included four professional and three service organizations.

Attending in pairs, six girls from each school met community and professional leaders during the meetings of those organizations. Someday because of their experience with BEST, these girls will be encouraged to become community leaders themselves.

AFS

AFS a small organization of twenty members worked very hard. Through car washes, the concession stand, a lobster sale and pilgrims they raised money to pay certain expenses for AFS students like class rings and graduation pictures.

It wasn't all work and no play. Holiday parties were held. A weekend organized for AFS students in the Duluth region, permitted them to stay at other members' homes. During this weekend these students had a chance to share experiences at a square dance and at the meeting.

Indian Club

"What is Indian Club?" "What do they do?" Not too many students knew the answers to those questions. The club was small, about twenty members. Almost every Wednesday they met in the cafeteria to plan for fund raisers and to learn more about Indian culture through filmstrips and crafts. They prepared maple syrup and made drums out of deer hide.

The primary purpose of the club was to reintroduce the Indian culture to Indian students, and make non-Indian students and staff aware of the values of their culture.

Rotarians

The Rotarians, an international organization of men, as a service club contributes thousands of dollars to the community. Because of an interest in the happenings at Denfeld and other Duluth schools, Rotarians established Junior Rotarians.

Each week a lunch meeting was held. Seven adults and one Junior Rotarian would sit at each table. These Junior Rotarians chosen from the senior class had to be able to converse easily with adults, be outgoing, and above all be able to represent Denfeld well. Being chosen a Junior Rotarian will always be a great honor.

At one of their weekly meetings Indian club members discuss future activities.

ACADEMICS

Denfeld's academics surely demonstrated the principle of learning from the best. Courses were designed to consider each student as an individual.

Our staff, then took the students and molded them to the best of their abilities.

A teacher must have a wide variety of methods and techniques to teach academics to students. In addition to academic competence, one must have a deep understanding of people. With this understanding comes the absolute need to acquire the ability to arouse, stimulate and motivate individual students with different abilities, interests, wants, and needs.

Two representatives having these abilities would be Mr. Doug MacIver and Mrs. Sharon Hexum. Mr. MacIver was the new athletic director for Denfeld. Some of the responsibilities of the athletic director were to schedule the date and place of games, provide transportation, and supply the referees. Besides having the job of athletic director, he was chosen as "Coach of the Year" for Boys' Region 7AA Cross Country.

Mrs. Hexum, an English teacher, was awarded Teacher of Excellence in the Minnesota state search for 1981 "Teacher of the Year." While teaching writing, reading, and yearbook journalism, she demonstrated the qualities for which she received this honor.

Creators of the Vast Art

Five different art courses offered throughout the year, were taught by two teachers: Mr. Dale Hagan and Mrs. Lou Nylund.

In ceramics students began to learn hand coordination through the different projects. They made pots and sculptures plus anything else their creative minds seized upon. Use of the potter's wheel allowed a variety of projects. Students did not use commercial glazes. Instead, they developed and used their own. This provided another learning experience.

Fibercraft class had interesting projects to keep students busy. In this area, choices included rug-making, stitchery, weaving, batik, and basketry skills.

Others enjoyed jewelry because they could wear whatever they made or use their handiwork as gifts. Pendants, belt buckles, and rings proved to be favorites. Although most of the materials were available the more costly ones like gold and silver had to be supplied by the student.

Photography class gave students a chance to learn and use some shutterbug techniques. Students learned various methods in taking and developing pictures.

Drawing and painting presented types of drawing and use of various mediums. With pencils, paints, and inks, students strived for different effects in this class.

Students worked at their own paces and finished the courses knowing that these creations were their own.

Perfection is the goal for Terry Nelson on the pronghorn, a fibercraft project.

Trying to create an effect he wants, Steve Balaich works on the potter's wheel.

Working on Christmas gifts for her American family, Jenny Kennedy, the AFS exchange student from Ireland, spends many hours after school.

Diligently working on a wall hanging is Darcie Swanson. It will be proudly displayed when complete.

Budgeting and Bookkeeping

Have you had trouble finding a job? Business classes prepared students for a real job.

Marketing and merchandising I, a class mainly for juniors, taught a variety of skills for jobs: orientation to distribution, marketing, sales, development of goals for self-improvement and how to find and apply for a job.

Available to a senior was marketing and merchandising II. This advanced class introduced job analysis, business organization and business operation to students.

Providing learning experiences, DECA (Distributive Education Clubs of America) contributed to occupational competence, encouraged free enterprising and economic awareness, and developed future leaders for marketing and distribution.

DECA members also got a chance to compete in areas such as food marketing, advertising services, food services, and general merchandising. The areas had both written and player levels of competition.

Junior office preparations and senior office occupation relations appealed to those interested in office work.

The various units taught in this class were: filing, typing, the usage of office machines, and how to fill out a job application form. Also taught was the proper way to answer a telephone!

Senior office occupation relations class, an advanced class, polished the students' skills. And another large part of the class consisted of OEA (Office Education Association). OEA held many fund raising events to earn money for participation in various competitions.

Three levels of competition included: Regionals — which were held at DAVTI. Anyone who wanted to participate at this level of competition was allowed to. State — the regional winners went on to the state level which consisted of students from all of Minnesota. Next it was on to the National Level — which included students from all over the country. The competition took place in Nashville, Tennessee.

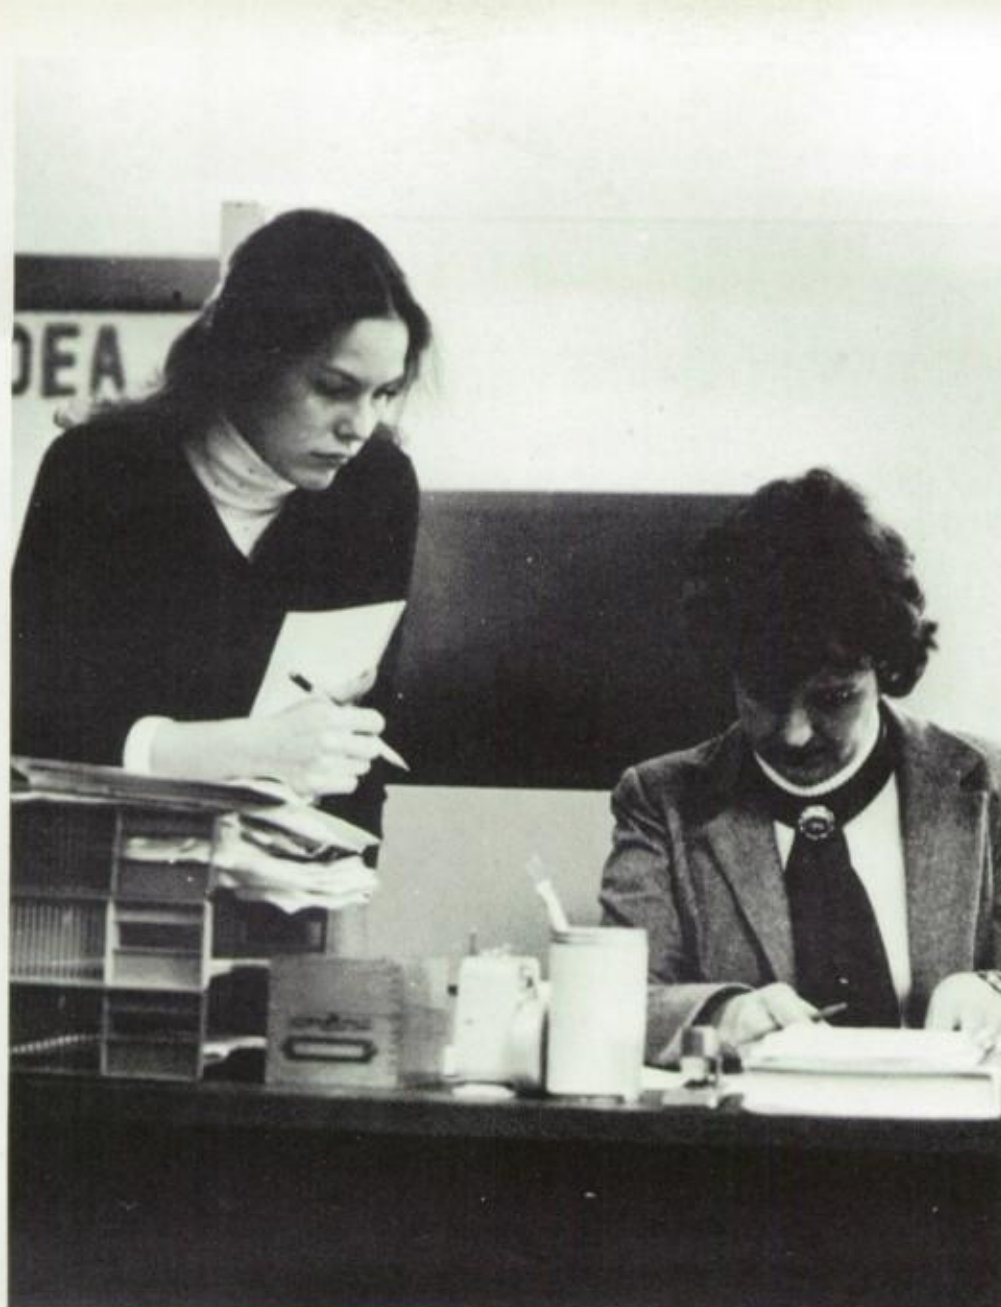

The other business classes that appealed to the students were: accounting I and II, small business bookkeeping, banking practice, shorthand I and II, and typing.

Home Economics:

Preparing for Life

When was the last time the look of satisfaction on someone's face turned sour once they tasted their beautiful chocolate cake? Imagine the frustration when a girl finally thought she had it right this time and then found she had her sleeve on backwards?

Much confusion arose on occasion in home economics. However usually asking the teacher got a problem cleared up.

Cooking and sewing weren't the only home economic classes. There were two other ones, family and you and housing and home decorating.

Family and you taught about relationships with the family and other people. It also taught about child care and home life.

Housing and home decorating showed the different ways to decorate for the future home.

Intensely concentrating on his cooking project Rick LaFave pours spaghetti sauce into a frying pan.

As Diane Pearson looks on, Miss Larson shows her how to do the next step on her shirt so she can go on with her blouse.

Busy at work in their family and you class these students pretend that they are Dear Abby for the hour.

Anxiously awaiting the results of a cooking project for the day are M. Plaisted, Sherri Selnes, and Jody Brady.

Industrial Arts:

Deep concentration is vital for Darryl Michelizzi, as he makes a precise cut in his woodworking class.

Startled by the photographer, Jeff Gilberg works on his digital thermometer project in electronics.

Watching very closely, Jim Johnson observes Jerry Opie on the drill press. They enjoy machine shop and its challenges.

Precisely working in his machine shop class, is Steve Balich on the bridge port mill. Wade Plaisted looks closely.

A fortunate bunch of guys — Dan Tolan, Jim Borash, John Risberg, and Al Schlichting, hold up plans for a duplex to be built.

Skills Plus Safety Equals Success

In the field of industrial arts, students had many choices.

Machine shop teacher, Mr. Keith Anderson taught his classes to construct 12-inch disc sanders. Repairing broken or worn out chairs, tools, and equipment provided another learning experience.

In electronics class, taught by Mr. Bob Hendrickson, students absorbed all aspects of electronics. Another course taught by Mr. Hendrickson was aerospace. Students built, then flew model airplanes. Constructing rockets offered an exciting challenge.

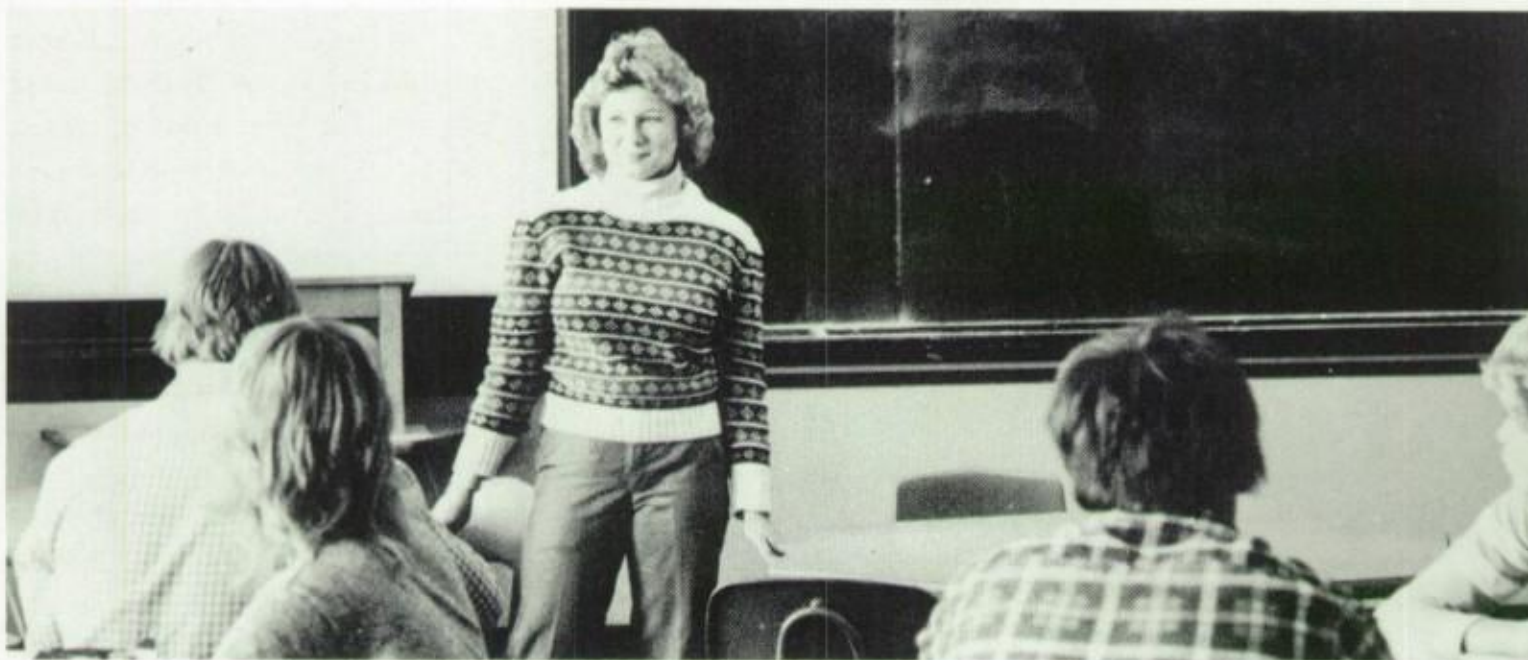

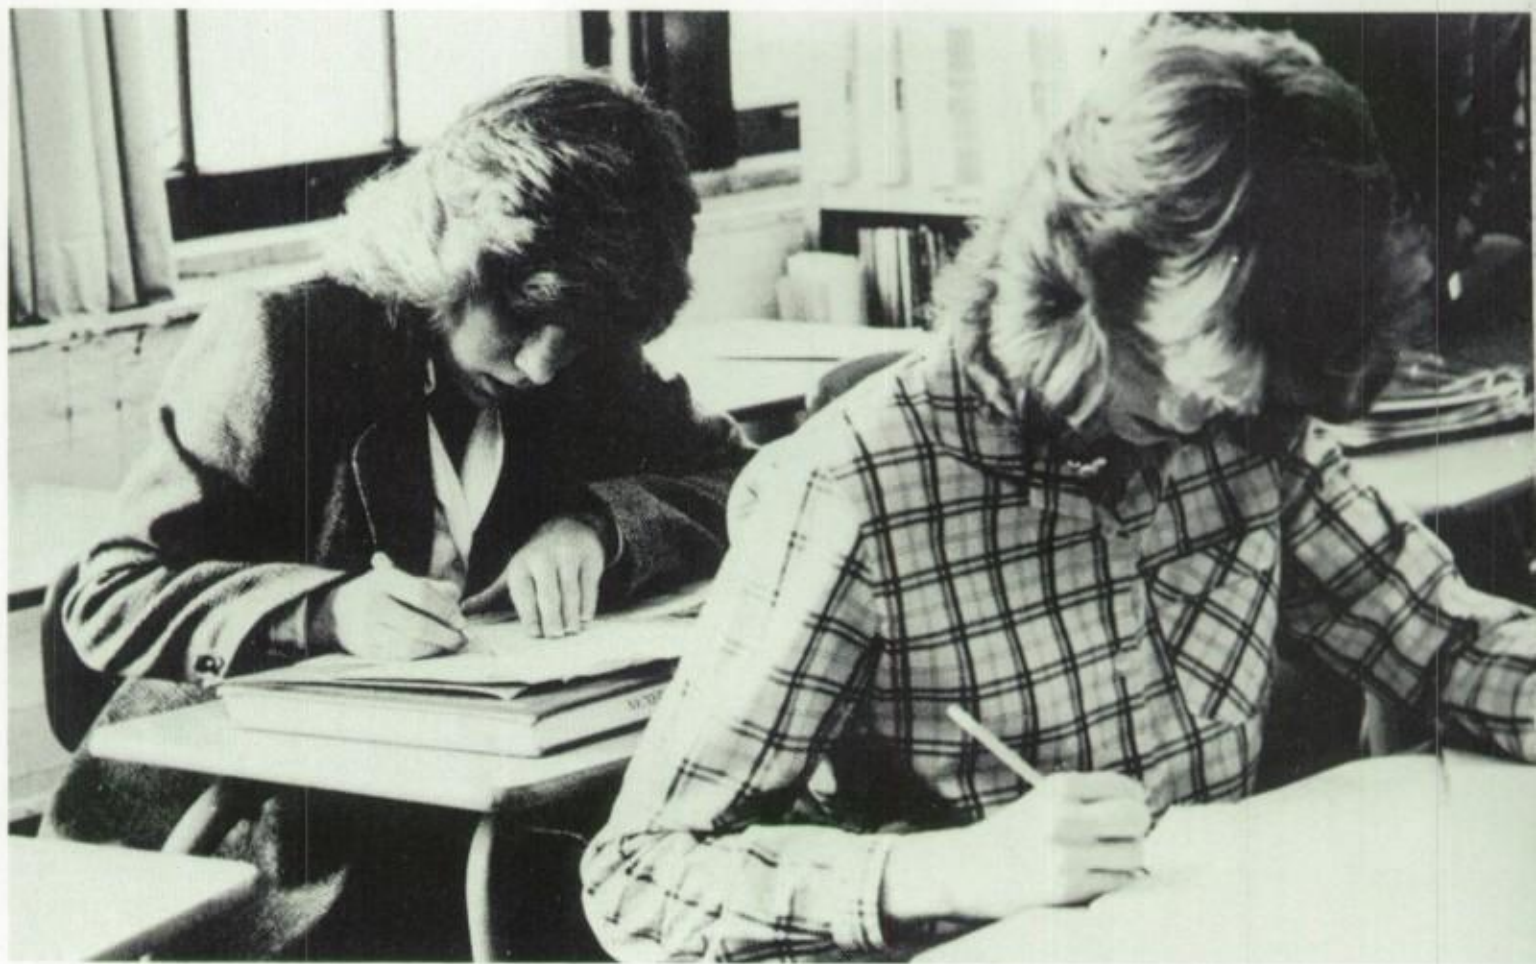

Teacher, Mr. Dave Nyholm let students vote on projects in woodworking. After completion of their project, students could build things of their own choice.

The many branches of architectural drawing flooded students with interesting and challenging assignments. Students in Mr. Jerry Knapp's classes had opportunity to take drawing for three years. Advanced students could draw plans and later have the satisfaction of seeing a completed house.

Industrial arts gave direction and inspiration to many students.

Fair or not? The yearbook journalism class does extensive writing. Students in this class, however, will not be receiving English credit. Elective credit will be given instead. Elise Peterson and Cheryl Sogard busily write their copy.

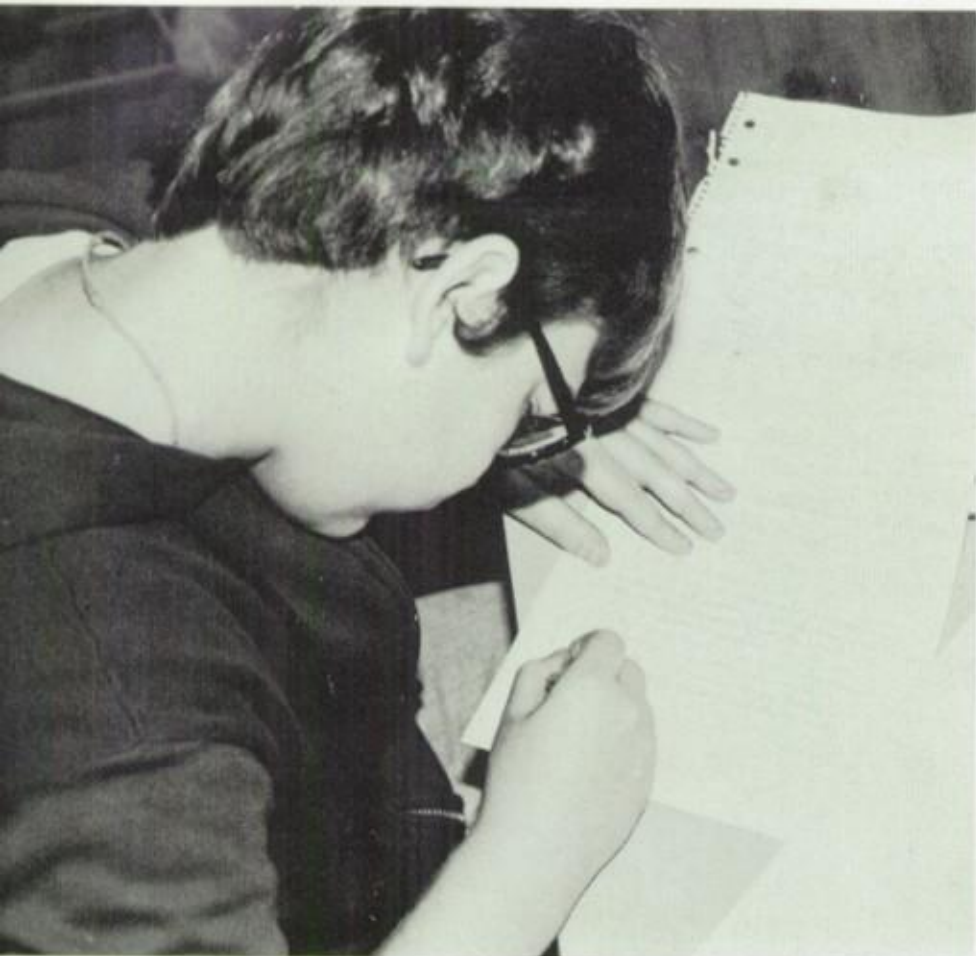

Speaking up front is Paula Danielson as she delivers a speech to her classmates about astrology.

In deep concentration are Sandy Merrit and Harley Pionk during their independent reading class. Barb Michelizzi finishes her research paper.

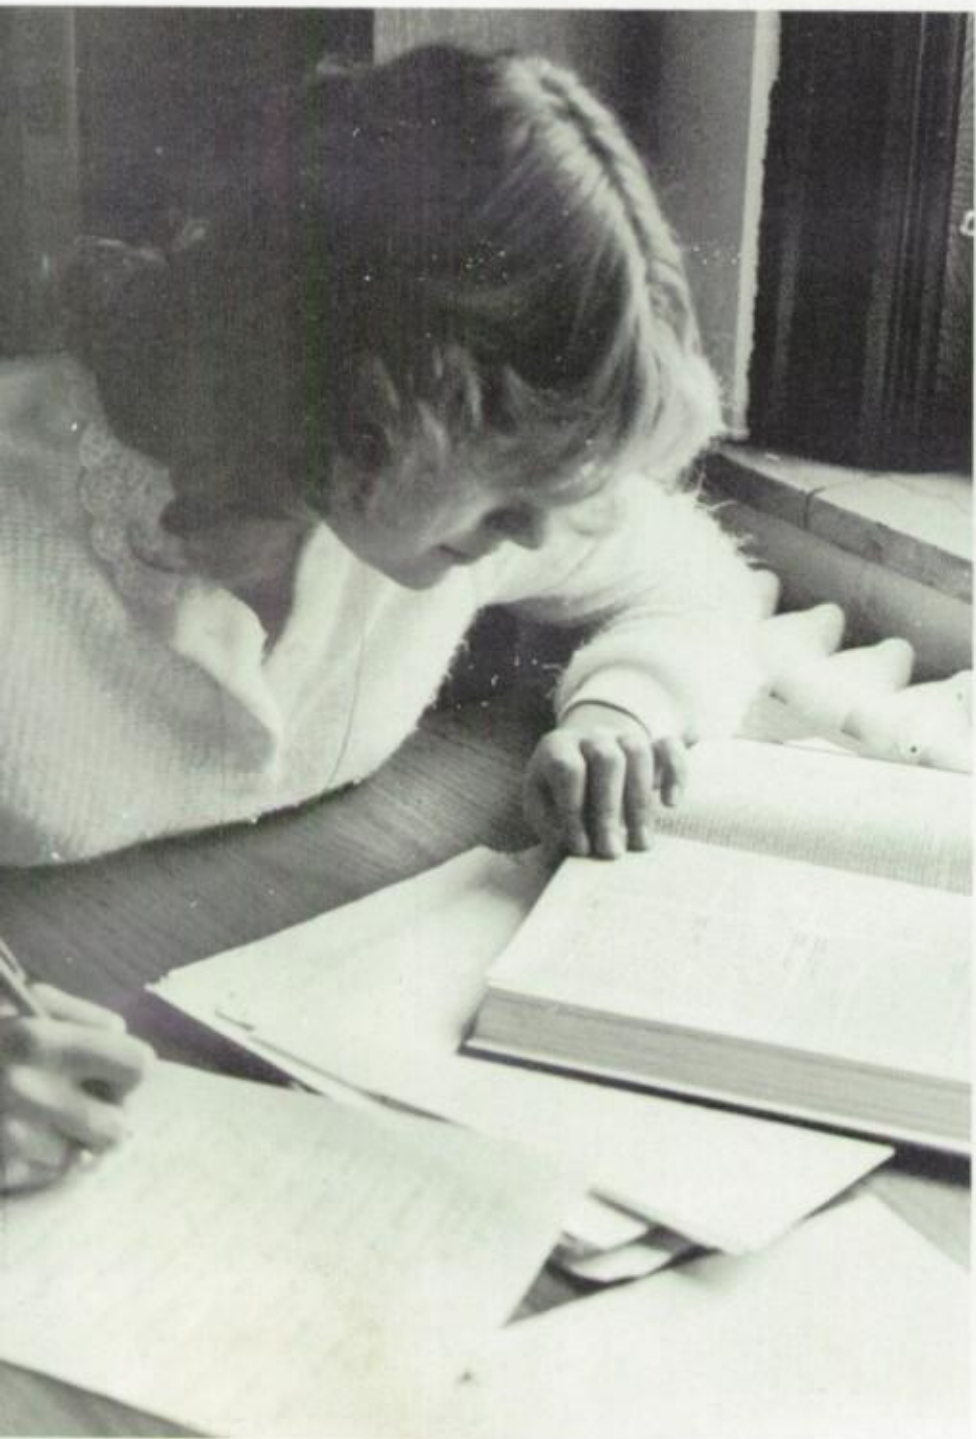

Installing a transmission creates problems, Craig Engblom, a junior, tells his speech class.

R's

During his basic composition class, Jim McTighe practices writing a business letter.

Reading his part in a play is Doni Sippon in his sophomore overview class.

"Journalism requires research," says Lori Bunt who spends several hours in the library.

Dominate English

Taught in a simple way, the 3r's comprised most of the lessons for a school day during the colonial period. Compared to the conveniences of today this period had many handicaps. Books and libraries were not plentiful. By candlelight or by fireplace reading and writing became difficult after dark.

Reading and 'riting, though, still dominate the English curriculum. Because of the importance to learning Denfeld required three credits for graduation.

Reading and writing made up most of the elective scene. Choices for different classes became easier to find for the student. Seven choices of literature electives gave students a chance to read. The choices ranged from humanities to independent reading and research. The writing aspect of English included classes like creative writing, basic composition, English for the job world and more.

Many English classes stressed basic skills while others studied careers and job seeking skills. Lifetime reading habits and thorough understanding of what students read received emphasis.

"Select your courses carefully in high school for a proper background in English," said Miss Endrizzi, department chairperson. Reading and writing, those two important R's, will be used throughout life.

The first year class began with learning about such things as nouns, verbs, family members, and clothing.

All four language classes tried cooking and also went caroling in December. No matter what course a student selected — Latin, Spanish, German or French — students received a sound foundation on the culture and language of their choice.

"Mr. Bergstrom, we don't understand!" Lending a helping hand to his frustrated second year Spanish class, Mr. Bergstrom, advises Marie Hager, Kathy Melde, and Laurie Mattila.

Having a little fun at the board in French are Joanne Lillo, Lee Kubiak, Anne Marchand, and Cindy Mellinger.

Enrollment Declines in Language Classes

Declining enrollment may have forced language classes out of Denfeld but students who took a year or two of language believed in learning a new form of communication and continued to study foreign language. Latin, however, lost students. This forced a combination of Latin I and II which included only 11 members.

Mr. John Bergstrom's Spanish classes exchanged letters with students from Costa Rica. Spanish also featured foreign exchange student, Lola Weber, from Chile who learned English while helping other students learn Spanish. Each student also wrote a business letter to another country.

German, as popular a language as ever, succeeded in drawing many students. "I was really pleased with the progress of my students in my first year class. They learned so fast!", said Mr. Dave Gordon. The advanced class included some students who had been studying German for three years.

The Mardi Gras was celebrated by French students on February 23. Mrs. Linda Herron emphasized speaking and learning dialogues.

While discussing the proper form of the letter, Mrs. Herron pauses to ask her students a question.

Involved in a friendly game of Spanish scrabble are Sheila Noordzy, Darci Mayo, and Becky Larson.

Deeply absorbed in her notebook, Janis Yesburger studies her German. Reviewing vocabulary is an important part of German studies.

Deep in thought, Tom Grias, Charley Yesburger, Peter Harper, and John Nelson concentrate on their German studies.

Close Encounters of the Math Kind

Did you ever want to know what a hypocycloid of four cusps looks like, or how to find the equation of a line that is tangent to an ellipse? If you learned either answer, it's obvious that you took one of many math courses offered.

Even though no math requirements existed for graduation, many students still took courses to help their futures. Classes included: math 9 through math 13, computer, and general math.

Throughout the year frustrated students grumbled, "I stayed up until 2 o'clock this morning working on this stuff, and I still don't know how to do it!" Or, "Naw, I can't go out tonight, I have to stay home and work on the problems that slave driver assigned." Yet, success came.

Interest in computers has become widespread. This field felt its growing pains at Denfeld and classes were crowded.

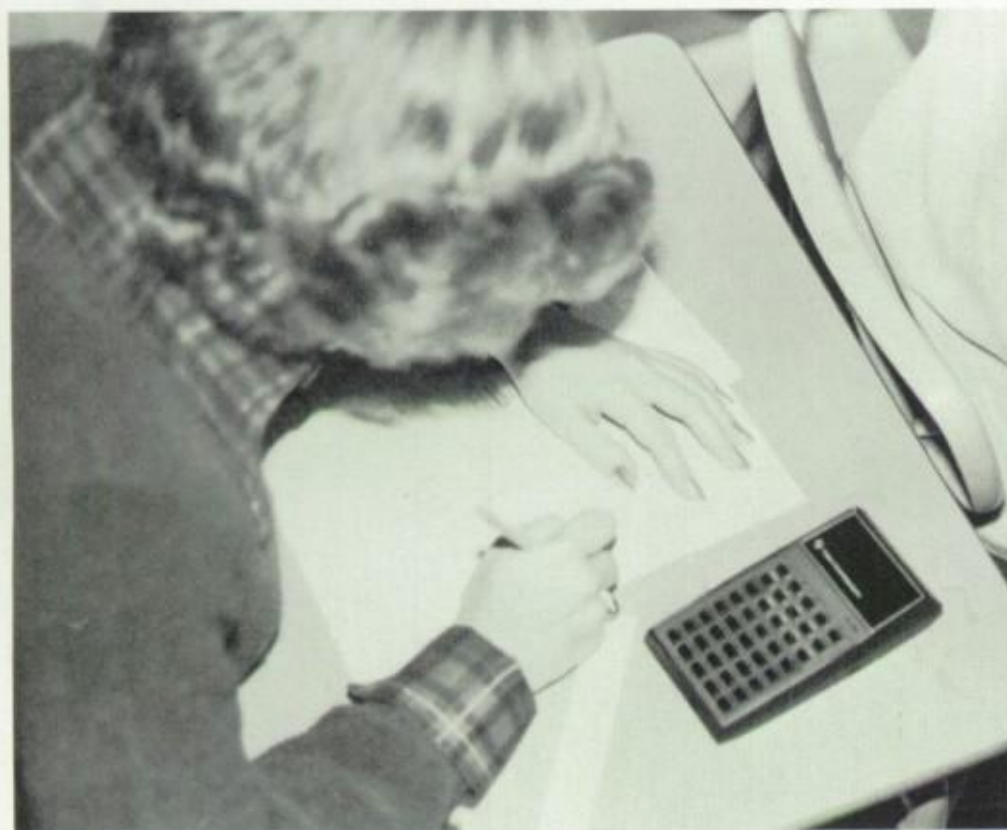

Due to the efforts of computer advisers, Mr. Marvin Johnson and foreign exchange teacher, Mr. Brian Hodgson, we secured a new Apple microcomputer in addition to the TTY-33 terminal to MECC we already had. Acquiring three Atari 400's followed.

A new computer club showed further interest in this field. Raising enough money to purchase a new line printer for the school became the Computer Club's first goal.

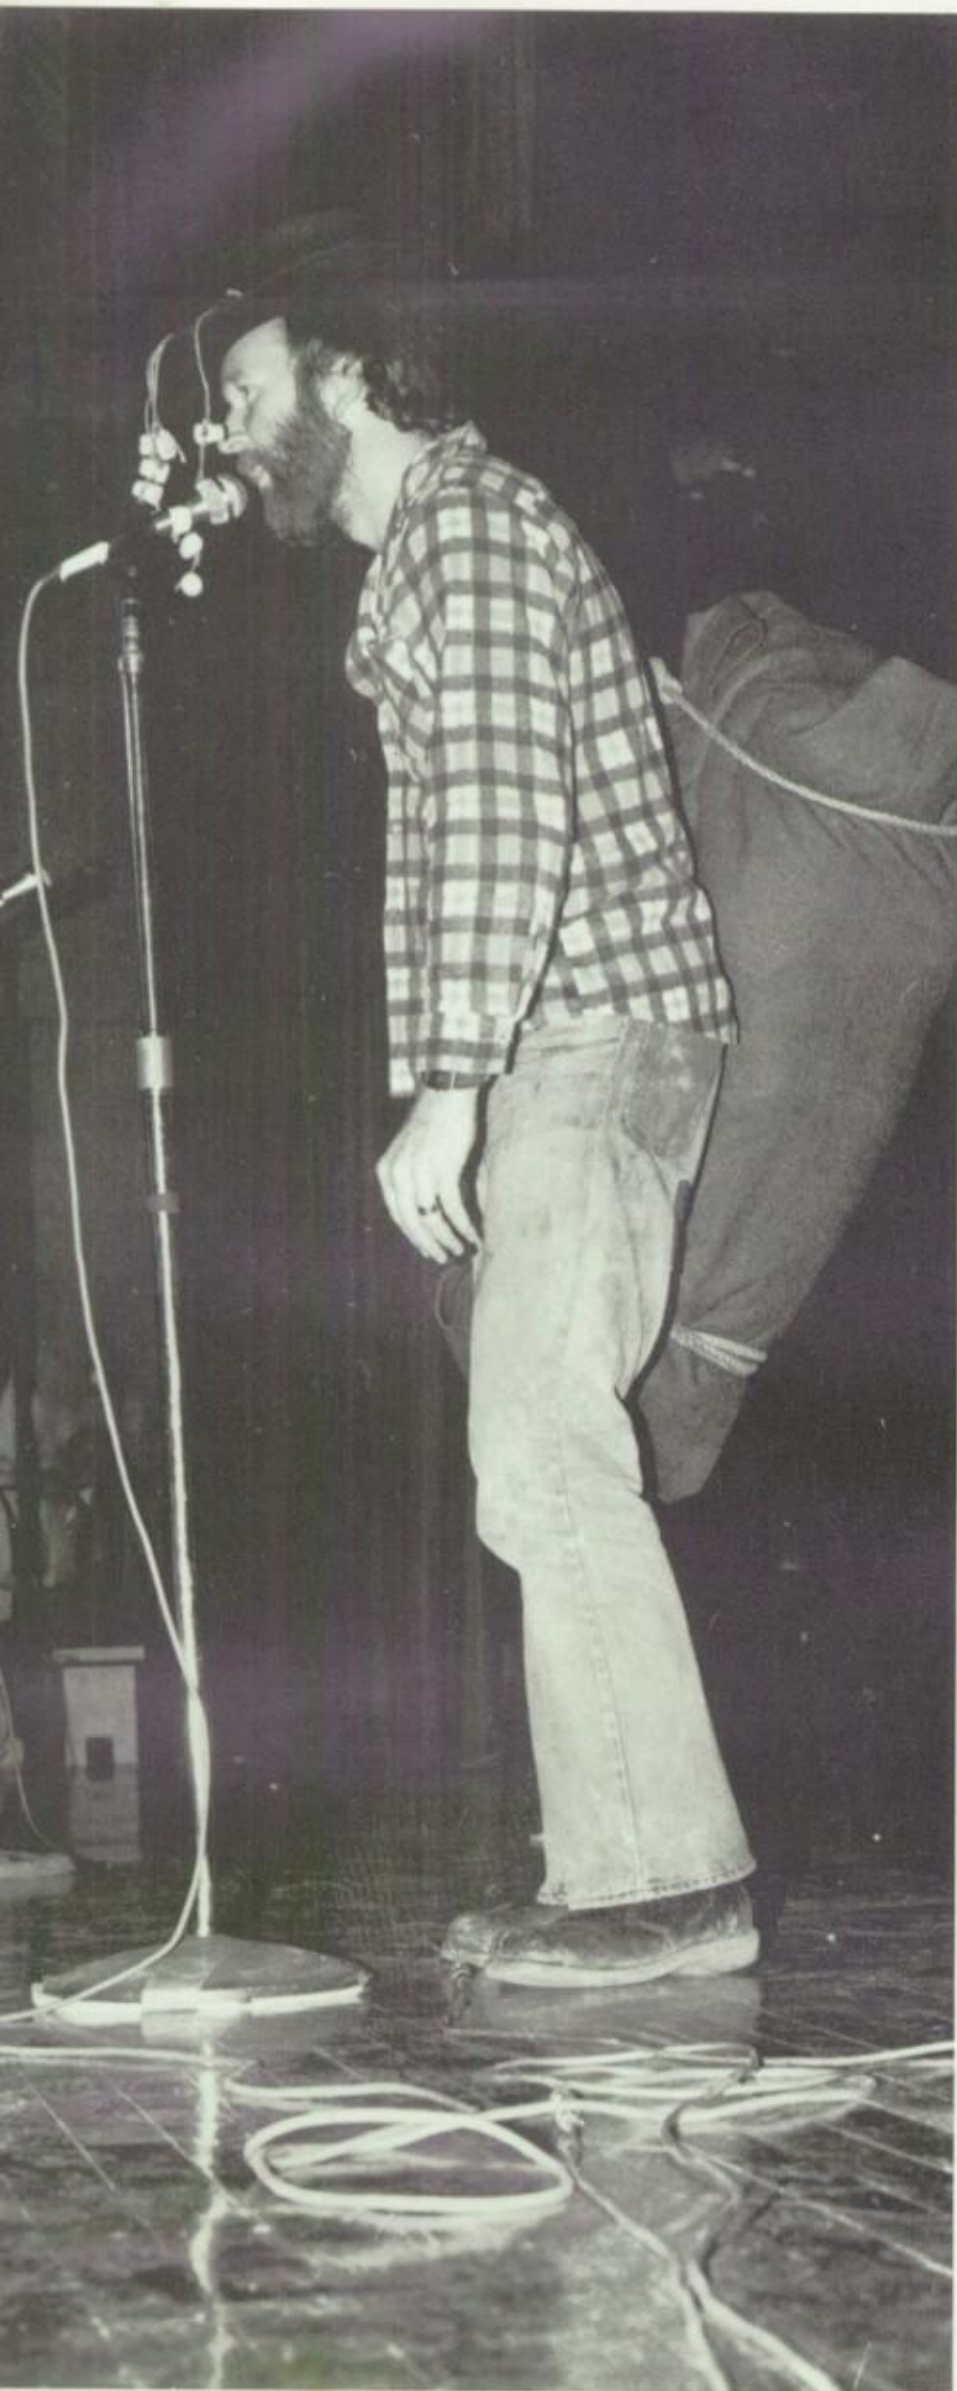

With calculator ready Karen Wing works diligently on a math test. Sometimes one needs all the help one can get.

Debugging his program for computer math class, Reid Thompson sits patiently waiting for the results.

In class Paul Shykes closely studies math assignment. Such deep concentration pays off.

$$\frac{-b \pm \sqrt{b^2 - 4AC}}{2A}$$

$$A = \frac{1}{2} BH$$

$$2x^2 + 3x + 19 = 6$$

$$\frac{(x+1)^2}{9} + \frac{(y-5)^2}{4} = 0$$

At a football pep assembly, Mr. Brian Hodgson sings, "Tie me kangaroo down, spoaht." This again proves his versatility.

Teacher, Mr. Paul Rigstad explains the distributive property to his class. Look at how closely they all listen.

Phy-ed and Health Stress Life

In order to become a Denfeld grad there are two classes you are required to have taken — health 10 and physical education. In health class an indepth unit on CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation) was given. One student commented jokingly, "Walking into Miss LeBeau's class was like walking into a morgue." He was referring to all of the Resuscitation Annie dolls lying on the floor wrapped in blankets. Other main topics covered were: mental health, first aid, death and dying, and sex education.

In physical education class students learned the basics to many sports: volleyball, basketball, floor hockey, recreational games, and the list continues. Besides the widely played sports there were some that students had rarely, if ever, experienced. Two examples of that were speedball and archery.

For those sports enthusiasts who enjoyed gym the first time around, physical fitness class was available. It met three times a week for two hours.

Three second hour phy-ed students stand by and learn the basics to ping-pong from gym cadet John Risberg.

Demonstrating to students the way game of shuffleboard is played are Coach Doug MacIver and John Risberg.

In case the need ever arises, Laura Cooper will be ready to save a life with her CPR skills. Connie Gatewood watches to learn the technique.

Floor hockey is a fast moving sport as shown here by some physical education students.

Students, Start Your Engines

Behind-the-wheel lessons, simulated driving, range, and classroom work were included in the driver's education program. The fee was $85.00 which may have seemed expensive but considering the experiences and opportunities became equalized. Having driver's ed made you aware of traffic laws, safety procedures, and good driving techniques.

The first time behind the wheel for some was in a driver's ed car. No wonder nerves flared up before the first street lesson. Others seemed to be cool and calm while driving which frustrated those who forgot to release the parking brake before driving away or those who cruised through an intersection missing the stop sign. The stop sign, of course, appeared out of nowhere.

The reason for taking driver's ed is obvious. Students hoped to attain that little plastic card; that little passport to freedom you never felt when asking mommy or daddy to drive you somewhere. It also beat walking especially considering Duluth's unpredictable weather.

Departing for one of Mr. Ray Muskat's famous street lessons are Ronnie Zobitz and Jim Welsh.

To check on the progress of his range students who are working on parallel parking, Mr. Muskat must brave the cold weather.

In order to become licensed drivers, students will hear many lectures from driver's ed teacher Mr. Pat Phillips. This one is on freeway exits.

Range lessons give you experience in everyday driving situations. Here one student practices his angle park.

Science . . .

Just for Brains?

Where's that muscle? What's an artery? Pulmonary what? Oops! That's the wrong leg! This smell is horrible! Did taking science classes only offer a chance to complain?

Junior Terri Wabik, an anatomy student stated, "My lunches began looking terrible. Then chicken legs started to look like cat legs!"

"The class was interesting and definitely challenging, like the smell," remarked Junior Jackie Venier.

Learning about all the bones and each important artery proved difficult for some people. "You practically have to be a brain to get a decent grade," explained Junior Joyce Misiura.

Besides anatomy, other classes were available. In biology students studied the how's and why's of living things.

Physiology was a continuation of biology. In it students learned about the human system.

In physics students learned about the laws of nature and social aspects of physical science.

Funny smells came from chemistry. This class provided students with basic concepts of modern chemistry.

Solving word equations can be tough, Mr. Rudy Voelkner must be thorough in his lectures.

Hard work and a calculator are needed in Mr. Voelkner's Temple of Knowledge. Shelly Cook demonstrates both.

Details must be pointed out to Mike Daigle and Lance Powell by Mr. Harold Harden.

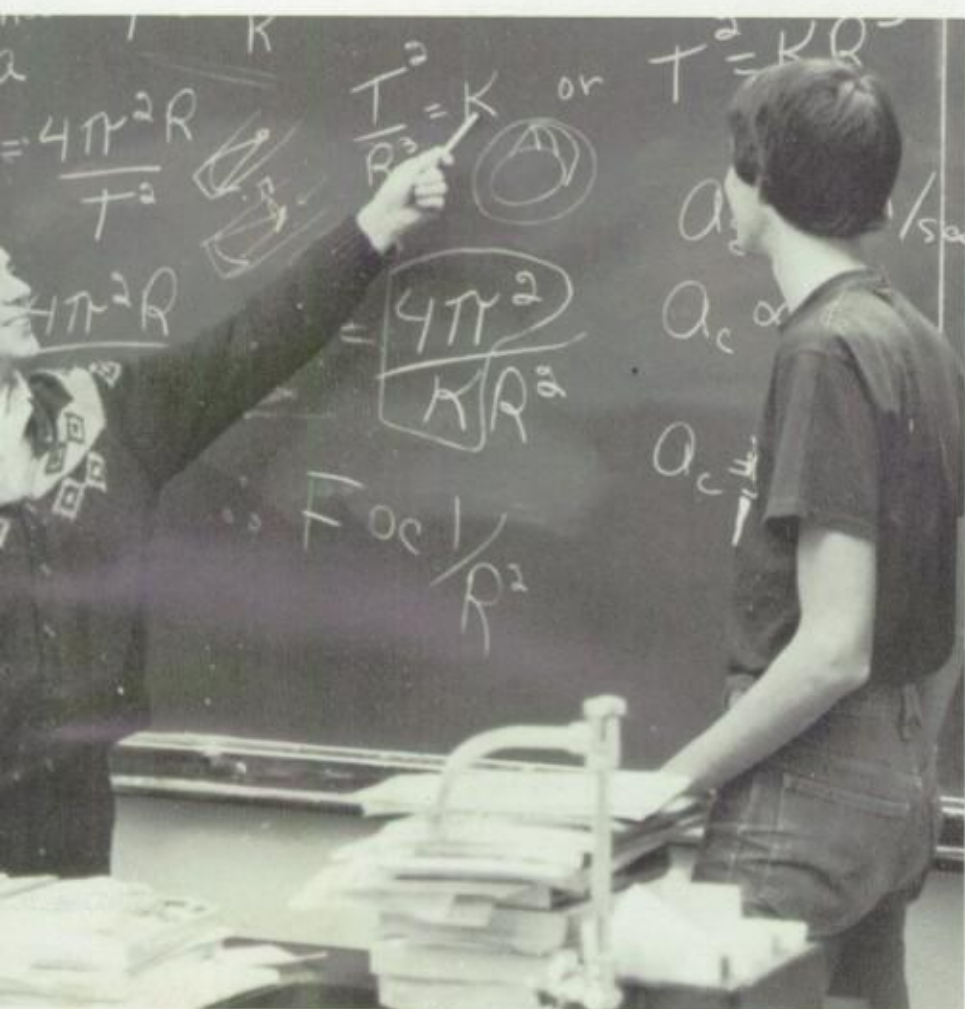

Uniform acceleration needs explanation, so Dave Budimir shows Lynn Stauty and Julie Downs this principle.

Chapter 8, is Mr. Harden's topic for his biology class.

Patiently looking for their cat's liver in anatomy are students Barb Paquette and Joyce Misiura.

Could this possibly be another Thomas Edison standing at the board? No, it's Chris Junget getting a quick review from Mr. Voelkner.

Social Studies

Our intricate and changing society proved a challenging topic for study. There were four areas of concentration in our social studies department. These were: government, economics, sociology, and world history.

U.S. history, the subject required by all students, covered events from 1865 to the present. This course stressed the hope for a better future for all. World history II explored the events of the rise of the nations from 1600 to 1900.

In national economics, another class offered, students attempted to find solutions to economic problems. Another course was personal economics. In this course, students focused on the individual and his relationship to the economy as a consumer, worker, and citizen.

If students' interests were world government, or foreign policy, then they could take world politics. In civil and criminal law, students experienced aspects of our government's legal system by attending court trials and acting them out in class.

Introduction to sociology consisted of the study of man and his social relationships with human groups. Thought-provoking ideas were covered by this class which inspired students.

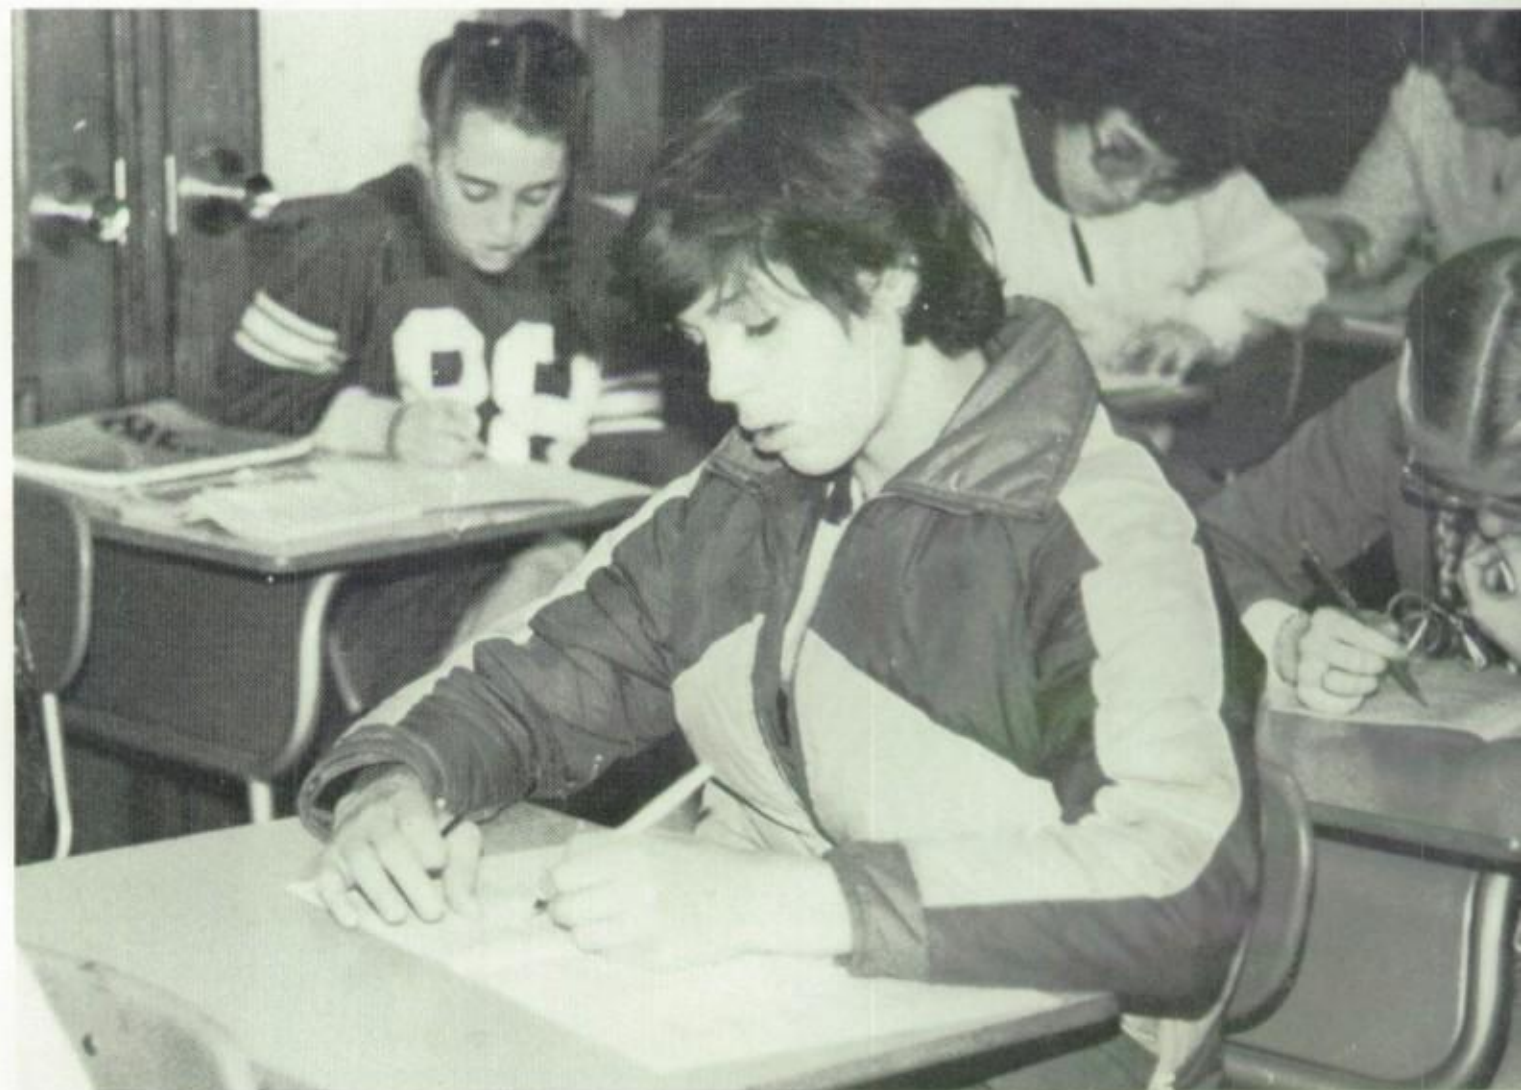

In the Indian studies class, students explored the American Indian culture. Vast information about our country's first citizens became available to students.

Introducing the Moslem Empire to the students is Mr. Chuck Hren.

Preparing for the guest speaker, St. Louis County Commissioner Bill Kron, Jim Abrahamson, Steve DeMars, and Trent Hotchkin, think about questions to ask him.

While filling out a survey, the introduction to sociology students think about their next answer. Randy Karlin carefully considers his responses.

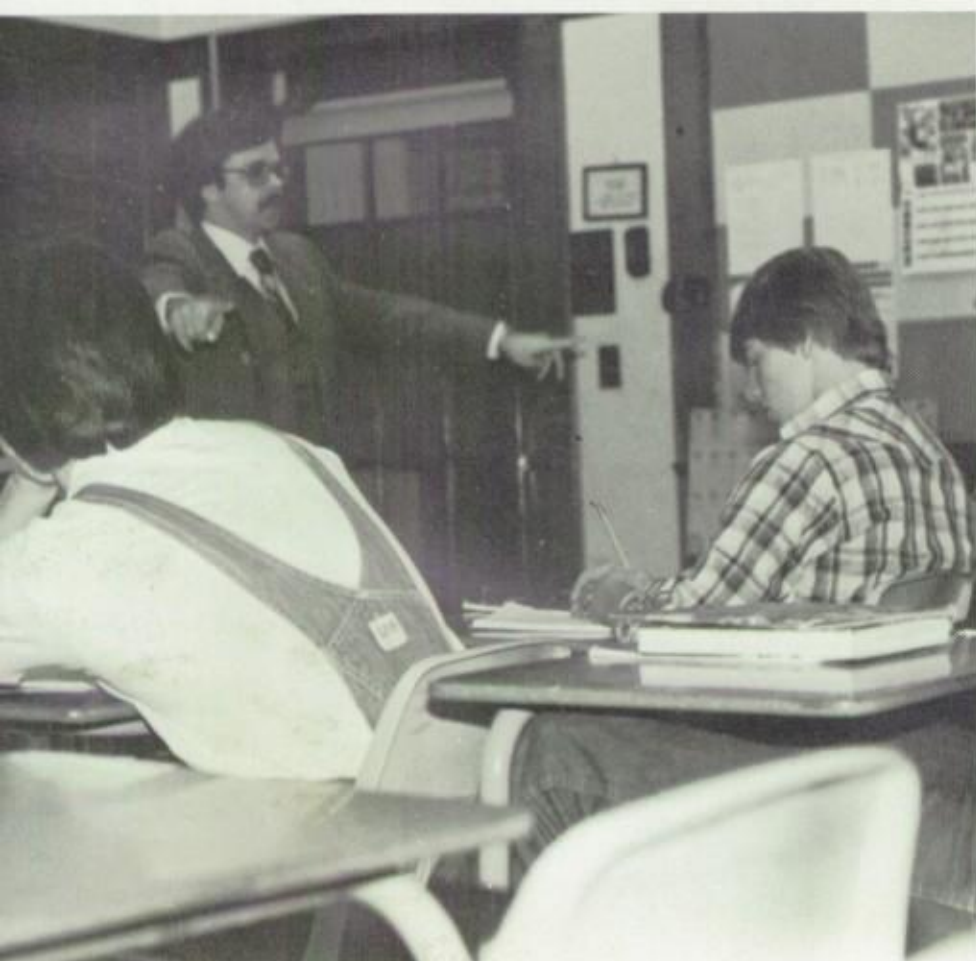

U.S. history is a class required by all students. Sophomores Tom Reynolds, Lyle Rock, and Tom Lepisto work on their worksheets.

In a U.S. history class, Paul Larson and Mary Jo Johnson work on their assignment.

To explain the functions of a St. Louis County Commissioner, Mr. Bill Kron gestures emphatically.

With pen in hand, Sandra Kristensen fills out a survey in an introduction to sociology class. Later the class compares ideas and opinions.

Special Services

Doesn't everyone know that teenagers have problems? Although problems ranged from emotional to academic to monetary, help was available to students. Aid came in several forms.

One was the Special Learning Disabilities (SLD) program. Mr. Skip Hendrickson and Mrs. Laila Johnson helped several students, mostly sophomores, with reading, writing, spelling, math, and social studies. During one hour, Mr. Dick Gastler was an additional instructor. Students received an English or history credit for this class.

Another important program, Intensive General Learning Disabilities (IGLD), offered students opportunities to learn skills in managing money and time, functional reading, special vocations, and independent living. In addition, five students spent their full class day at a special education program: Goodwill Industrial Vocational Enterprise (GIVE). There they attend classes all morning, and receive vocational training while working in the afternoon. Mrs. Vicki Samuelson, Mrs. Lee Anne Clausen, and Miss Jane Hoven taught the Involved in their daily lesson, Sophomores Allison Carlson and Vicky Stennes watch the instructions of Mrs. Ann Lemaster.

Developing skills in handling money is just one of the things Junior Mike Peterson does in class.

Concentrating on a perfect throw is Becky Wingness. This bowling tournament at Stadium Lanes is only one of the many Special Olympics Events scheduled.

Serve Students

students. Three aides: Mrs. Evonne Schlichting, Mrs. Corrine Wickenburg, and Miss Nancy Granberg were also in the program.

Helping students with problems of a more personal nature was the Student Advocates Inspire Learning (SAIL) program. Mr. John Grola, Mrs. Katie Spreitzer, and Mrs. Minnie Shreve offered support in the forms of academic counseling and parental communication.

Mrs. Ann Lemaster worked with two hearing-impaired students. She taught social studies and English, but with sign language. The students were mainstreamed with an interpreter for their classes. One of the girls, Allison Carlson, even helped her health classmates learn some basic vocabulary in sign language!

Work study (WECEP) offered students job experience, as well as a chance to earn money. The participants, under the advisement of Mr. Bill Bordson, spent half of their day at work, and the other half at school.

Regardless of the situation, there was always someone to help if problems arose.

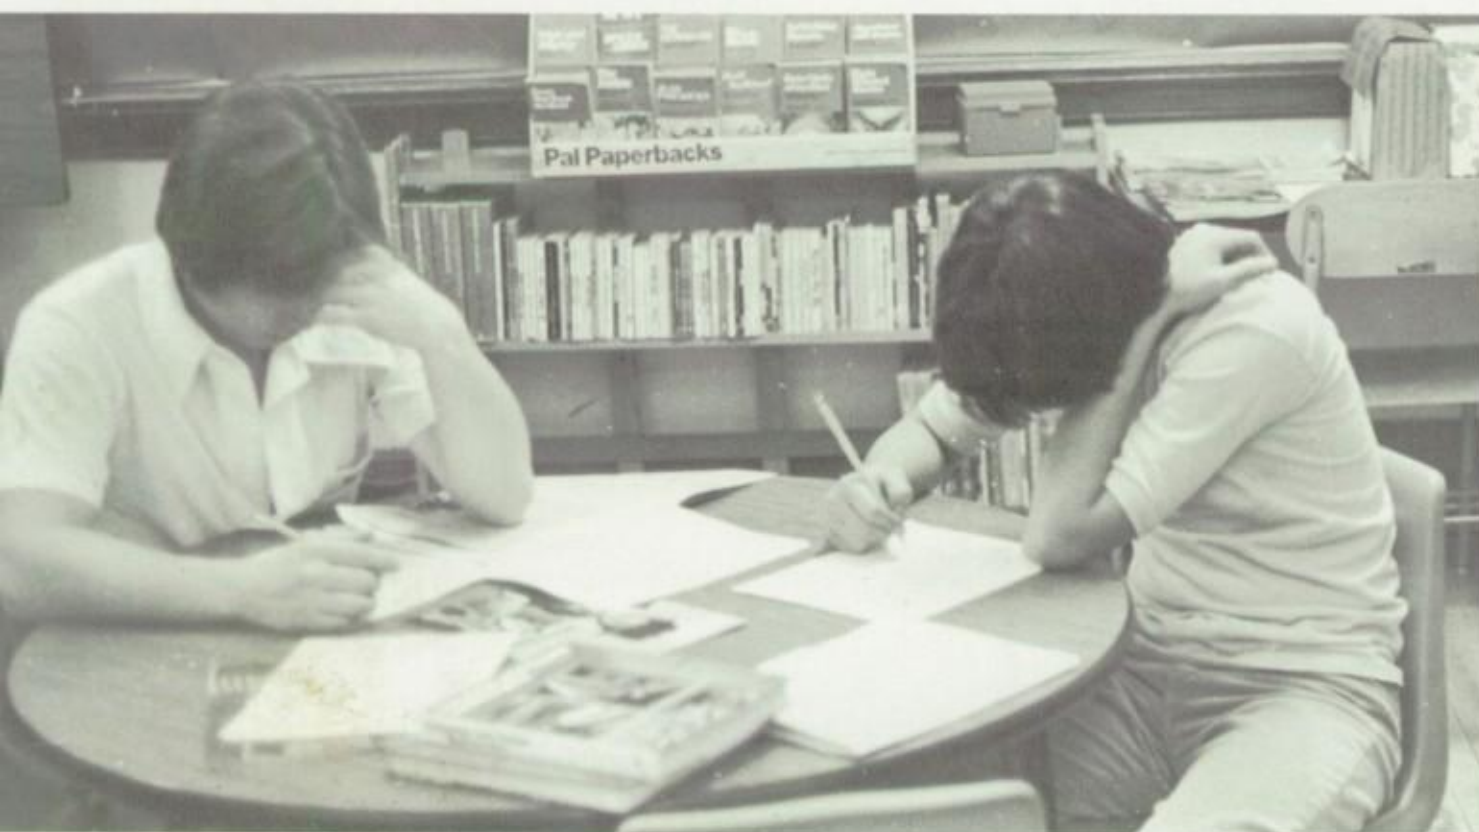

Working hard on today's assignment from the Scholastic SCOPE Magazine, are students Carl Guldner and Karla Overby.

Helping Steve Berish with his classroom work is Mrs. Evonne Schlichting.

Determined to finish the exercises given them are Jeff Wojtkowiak and Rich Smith.

Exploring What Lies Ahead

Giving the future some thought, students attended secondary education programs at Duluth Area Vocational Technical Institute. Classes varied from auto mechanics, to agribusiness co-op, forest/national resources, and horticulture. Carpentry and auto body seemed to be the most popular with students.

Typically, a day in the forest/national resources classes would consist of lectures. Later students would step outside to identify winter trees through a key to Minnesota trees.

Auto body courses gave students basic auto body repair techniques, skills in gas welding, sheet metal repair, and in refinishing cars' bodies.

Carpentry acquainted students with the building construction field, and emphasized maintenance and safety of power tools.

Horticulture classes taught students to grow, propagate, and care for plants.

Students will have more job opportunities in the future, due to these classes. Many plan to go into the variety of fields available.

Although the students may not have enjoyed the bus ride to Cathedral and DAVTI, they did take advantage of the many courses offered there.

Carefully checking the spark plugs George LaLonde and Mark Dee work at their automotive class at Cathedral.

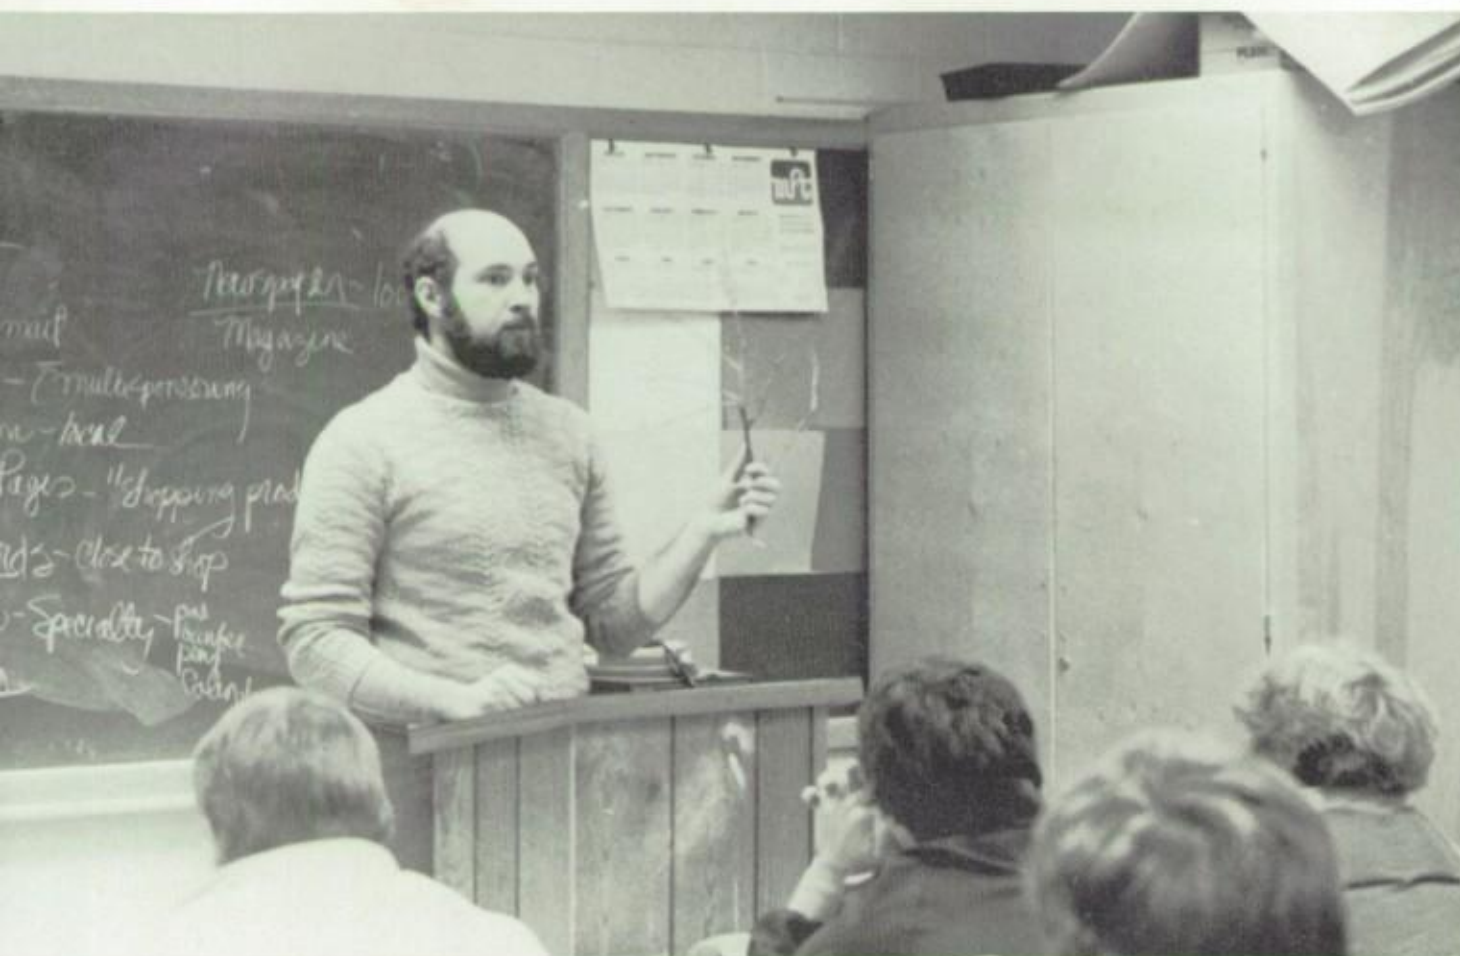

At Cathedral Debbie Reynolds learns new roles and responsibilities in her exploring childhood course.

Busily working on a new industrialized sewing machine, Laurie Amic constructs clothing in fashion careers class.

In their spare time Rick Nelson and Vic Linsten test their know how from what they learned at their automotive class.

Forest National Resources class listens intently as the instructor lectures on the identification of trees.

Taking a close look at part of a tree branch is Charlie Yesberger. He is a student in the forestry class.

Increasing their knowledge about forestry is what Scott Knapp, Dan Stauber, Pat Gregg, and Brian Green are doing by listening to lecturing by the instructor.

Morning? . . . Is that my alarm? Unfortunately it says 6 a.m. Slamm!!!
The snooze button goes down for fifteen more minutes of much needed sleep. Rise and shine. Yawnnn . . .

First step — the bathroom. One peek in the mirror . . . Ugghh!!! I must gather courage for the shower. It's cold in there! Ahhh, that's better. Now I feel half awake. Drying myself off I decide what to wear.

After washing my face and lathering up, I begin the task of shaving. It's especially touchy because it's morning. Just a few nicks and cuts this time. Then lavishly splashing on the aftershave, I prepare for the day's hustling.

I think girls are lucky. All they have to do is wash their faces. But then they put make-up on and fuss with their hair. Boys lucked out when it came to hair. All we have to do is blow it dry and comb it.

Is that my stomach growling? "Mom! I'm hungry! What's for breakfast?"

The clock's glaring face says it's time to leave. One more glance in the mirror . . . what a hunk!

Mom yells, "Don't forget your lunch money. And get the garbage out, will you?"

School ... first stop is my locker to deposit my jacket and grab my math book, notebook, and pencil. I stop to exchange some words with friends.

First hour: It's hard to stay awake and get my brain to work the problems.

Homeroom gives me a chance to rest while listening to announcements. There I sit and think about how the day is going and about the mint girl sitting next to me.

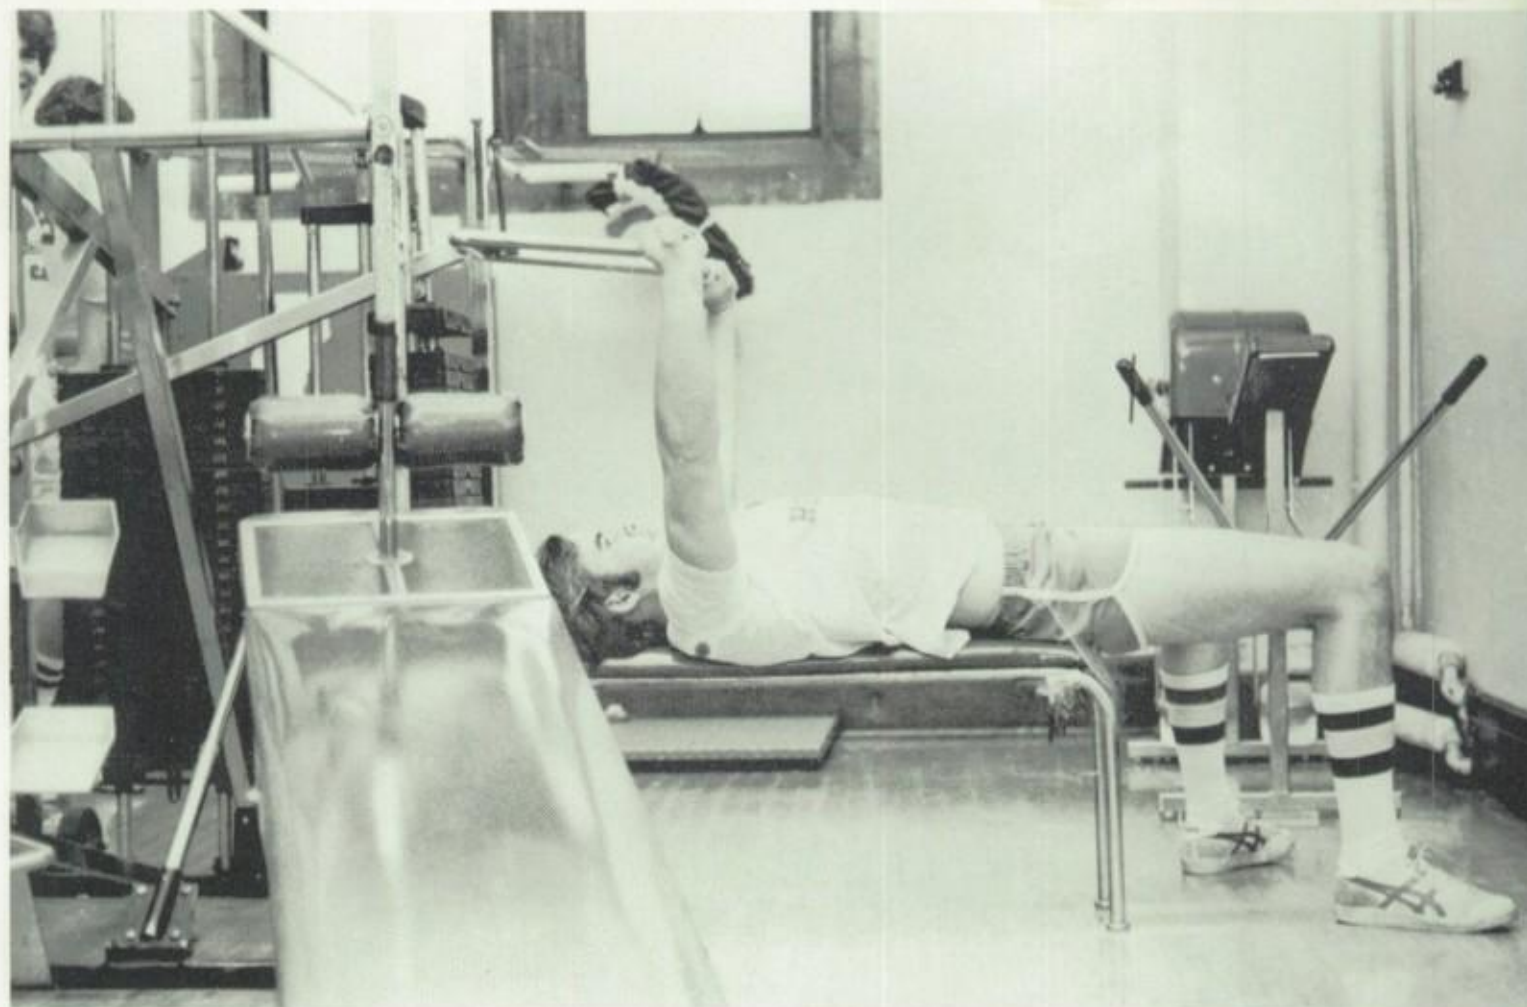

Second hour goes by quite fast. Everybody is perking by then. I guess we all wake up by then.

Finally ... break! I try to get a coke out of the machine ... NO COKE! As I give it a swift kick, out comes a coke! Then I buy a doughnut and chow it down while talking to the guys (with my mouth full, of course). I'm sure glad break didn't have to be spent doing last-minute assignments today.

Third hour is not too bad, but it is usually a big countdown to 4A lunch. Today's lunch is at Hardee's because the school's tunaburger is a bummer. But yesterday's tacos were terrific! I think everyone chows down in the cafeteria on taco days.

Fourth hour is usually a drag. I try to nap and digest my lunch. Today is different though. We have a sub, and you know what goes on when the teacher's gone.

Fifth hour wasn't as bad as sixth hour, but the minutes seemed like hours.

Spare time for Jim Ehle is spent lifting weights.

Taking time before school, Steve Ruce, Rick Nelson, John Nelson, and Peter Nowak talk about last night's happenings.

To finish first hour's assignment, Paul Ibriks works diligently before school.

This group pauses to take a break near the smoke stack.

Bagging groceries at Denfeld Super Valu is one way in which Bill Voelk spends his time.

Day In . . .

Day Out

Because so much time is spent in school, Dave Dyson and Rick Bourdeau made this "come away from home" locker. This locker is complete with plush baby blue carpeting and a canvas deck stool.

Free time is not always spent getting a coke or doing last minute homework. These students get a little fresh air . . .

Students dismissed after sixth hour madly rush to catch the bus to take them home.

With another hectic day completed, Mr. Dyson meets with kids regularly after school, for an intriguing game of "Dungeons and Dragons."

It's 2:30 and my heart leaps as my feet carry me out of school. My first impulse upon setting foot in my house is either to hit the refrigerator or the couch — sometimes both. Today I choose the refrigerator.

I call up a few guys to see what's going on tonight. After we settle that, a rerun of "Gomer Pyle" is next on today's agenda. "Carol Burnett" is next which means dinner will soon follow. Good, I'm starving!!

Dad lends me the car after I promise to mow the lawn Saturday. I drive first to Steve's then to John's. We cruise around for an hour or so trying to find a few friends. Then we stop back at my house for munchies. The main plan is Friday's party at the quarry.

They leave and I spend fifteen minutes max on homework. Oh, are my eyes tired! Yawn . . . Homework can wait.

Nighty, night!

Zzzzzzzzzzz . . .

Beaut's . . . Beepers and . . . Beaters

Screeech! Squeeeal! Hooonk! What's that horrible noise?! Those were the sounds that resounded year round, even though rules were broken.

In the parking lot there were beaut's and there were beaters. The craze for cars was like a terminal disease. But rising gas prices, insurance costs, and car upkeep made it almost impossible to own one. Jerry Opien complained, "Almost my entire paycheck goes straight into my tank."

Not everyone worked to support his car. Most people went with pleading eyes to their parents. "My mother pays for everything on my car and it really makes things rough around the house," Terry Anderson said. Chris Pirkola said, "I get old cars, fix them up and sell them to pay for the one I drive."

No matter how they were paid for, these different pieces never ceased showing up in the parking lot. The variety was incredible. From clean machines to rusty crusties, these four-wheeled friends carried their owners to school, games and cruisin'.

Olds, owned by Jerry Opien, is constantly seen cruisin' the streets of Piedmont.

Waiting for Chris Pirkola and a lady who needs a ride home is The Bird.

Mysteriously shaped this GTO gives us its best shot. Bart Solberg claims this machine is mean.

Belonging to Scott Chaffee is this black wicked babe parked above fifth street.

Shorted a truck, Mr. Brian Hodgson uses Mr. Marvin Johnson's car while taking his place.

Mr. Jerry Klun's little bug faithfully claims this spot in the teacher's parking lot.

Red and slick, Steve Anderson's machine is cruisin' to games and school. He won't share any of its secrets with us.

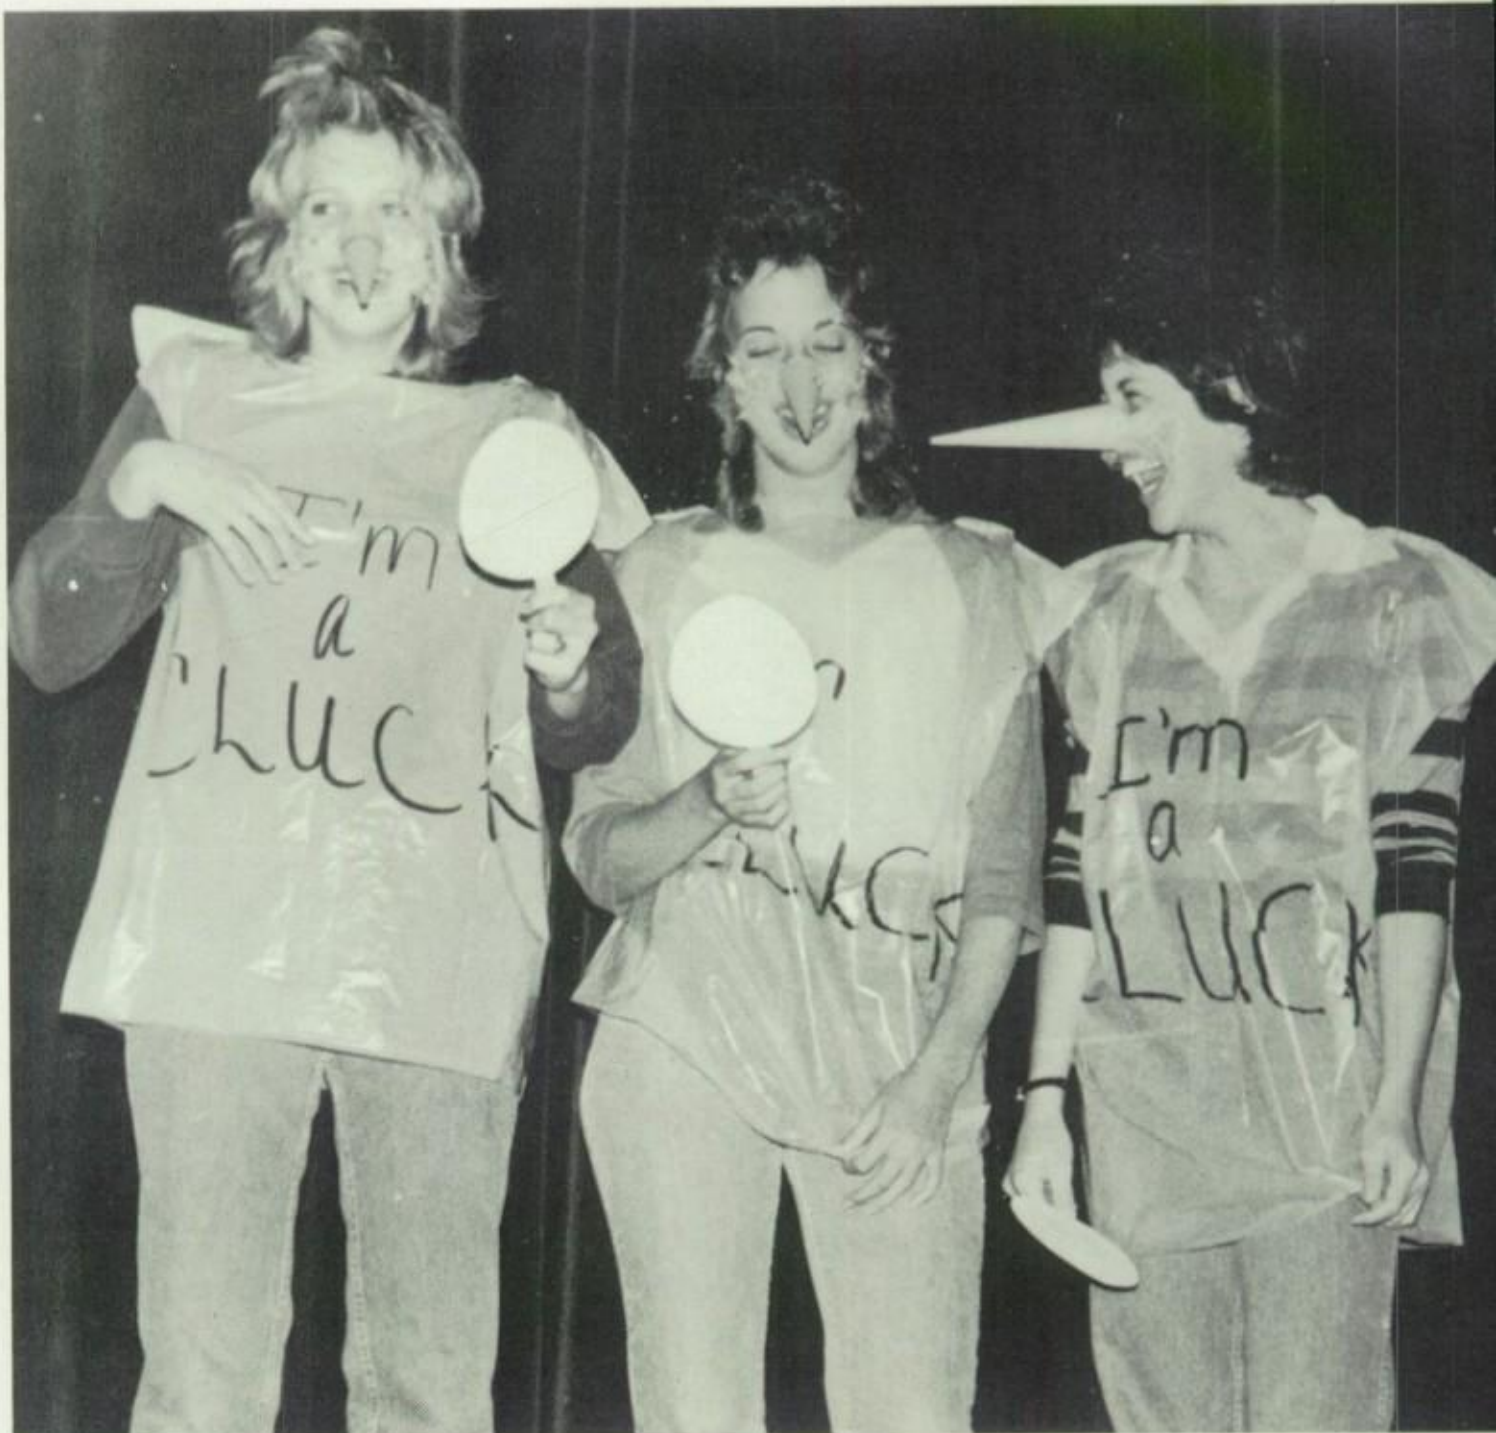

This teenie friend, owned and loved by Mark Carlson cost 1100 dollars. It now carries him everywhere.

New Members Begin New Year

"I'm a chicken, you're a chicken, we are chicken's all!" Those were the sounds heard throughout the halls on September 30, when the Girls' Club put on their annual sophomore initiation day. Lipstick and feathers were applied, beaks were attached, and plastic bags with "I'm a cluck," written on them were worn.

The Criterion was made up of a small, new, and inexperienced staff of 11 members. Dukes Knutson stepped down and gave the difficult job of adviser to Mrs. Stolen. It was challenging and difficult to get organized but once we were organized, it was a lot of fun." Minimum national standards for education, which are the requirements for graduation, was the established topic for Debate. Lincoln Jr. High debaters were given the opportunity to practice and receive coaching with the team, which contained 19 members: two seniors, eight juniors, and nine sophomores.

Cross Country was among the many sports which began training in the fall. Practice paid off for the boys' team as they took the Lake Superior Conference Title at Grandview. Eight teams participated in the match. The girls' team finished fourth. More students became involved in Cross Country and aided to the success of the team.

Truly, high school activities are the other half of education. The newness of the activities proved difficult for students early in the year. Yet most students found a rewarding experience.

Football fans even come in very small sizes. Some may be future students. Stephanie Rohsfeld is the Pom Pom Girls' mascot.

Waiting patiently to perform at halftime are Pom Pom Girls Julie VanReese, Stephanie Cook, Cindy Mellinger, and Cheerleader Mary Stauber.

Faithful Fans

As the fall season began, so did many activities. That meant countless hours of practicing to gain self-confidence and ability. After preparing hard for competition, students enjoyed having a little encouragement behind them. Fans supplied this type of support with regularity.

Opinions differed on the various spectator sports. As one tennis fan said, "It's a fast moving game and a real challenge."

When asked why they liked to attend the games, football fans commonly replied, "I like the sport. It's very exciting." Many added, "I like to give the team support."

A soccer team made up of the West Duluth community and Denfeld students was called the West Kicks.

Being a fan involved more than just viewing the event. Fans showed loyalty, courtesy, and spirit. Sometimes supporting the team proved difficult because of weather, facilities, or surroundings. But at sporting events, wherever they were, you could always find faithful fans!

Spirited spectators create a supportive mood for the football team as they defeat the Central Trojans 17-14 in the first home game of the year.

Showing the football team some of their school spirit and loyalty by clapping are Missy Olafson, Ann Janchar, Carol Tessier, and Cindy Norman.

Practice Makes Perfect

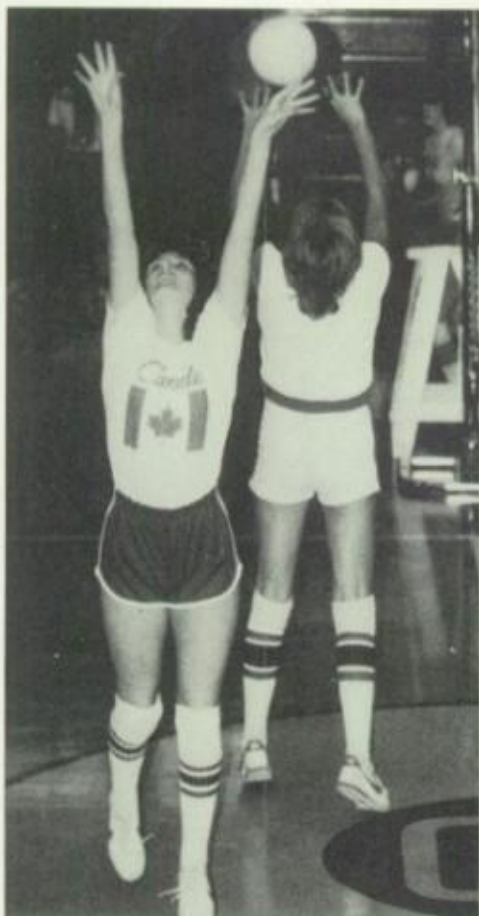

Gearing up for fall, most sports such as football, tennis, volleyball and swim team began practicing during the summer. The girls' swim team, coached by Fred Gustafson, united with Morgan Park to make the team bigger and better.

Preparing for the fall's games, the Cheerleaders, Flagtwirlers and Pom Pom Girls began meeting in the summer as did Girls' Club and Union.

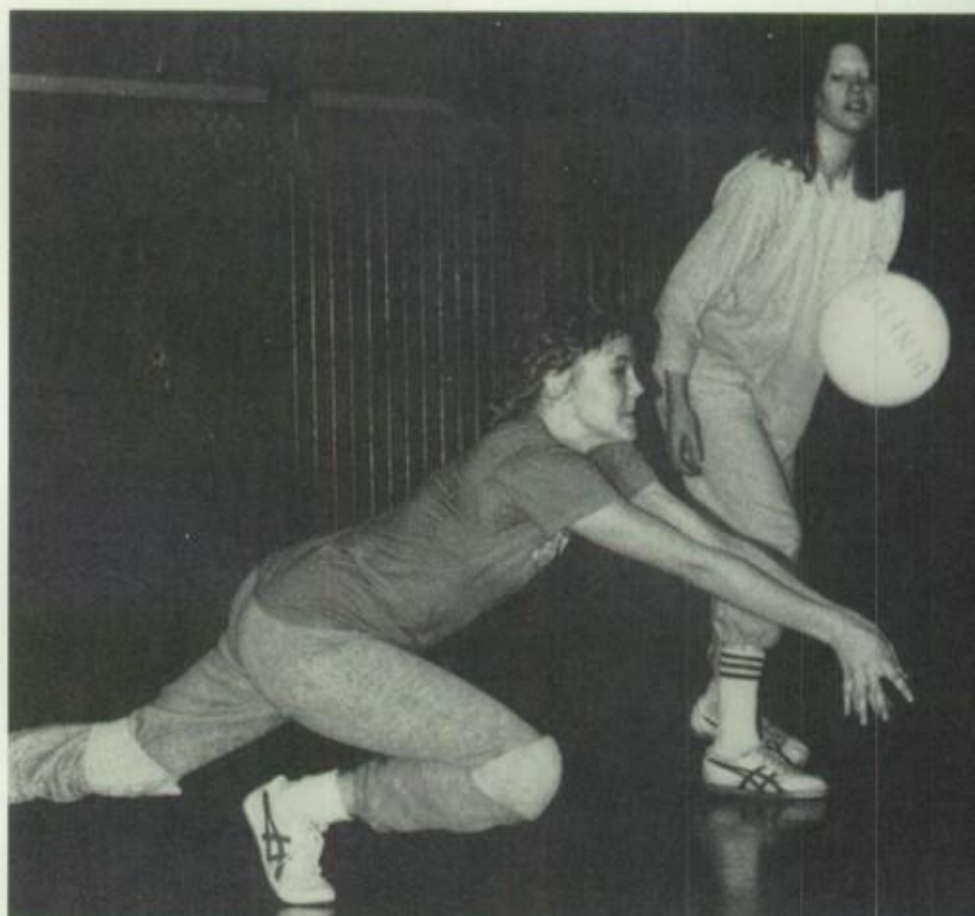

AFS had a lobster sale at the beginning of the school year to make money to support the AFS students attending Denfeld.

Not only did the students' activities begin getting ready for fall in the summer, but the janitors and teachers did too! The janitors worked through the summer scrubbing and waxing the floors, washing the walls and cleaning all of the furniture. The teachers had to unpack all of their boxes and get their rooms ready for classes to begin.

All of these preparations led to excitement for the coming year!

It Rained on the Hunter's Parade

Denfeld fans piled into Public Schools Stadium to watch the "Maroon and Gold" game against East. Rowdies dressed in maroon and gold equipped themselves with painted hard hats, megaphones, confetti, rain jackets, blankets, and cheers for their football team.

Faithful parents sat in one section with their umbrellas and thermos jugs filled with warm liquids for half-time. Sophomores stood on the benches or hung around down underneath the stands.

The marching band had planned a big half-time entertainment with the Pom Pom girls and the Flagtwirlers performing to Feelin' Seven-Up and Woodchoppers Ball, but because of the rain the band announced that they were not marching during half-time. Performers were upset because of all the hard work put into making half-time a good performance.

Everyone was rainsoaked by halftime but spirits were not dampened. The cheerleaders led the crowd in a rowser that fired up the rowdie section.

It was a close game. Keeping the score at 7-0 wasn't easy. One football player stated, "We didn't get down after East scored, instead we played better and tried not to let another score pass by our defense."

Everyone must think that playing in the rain must be hard for the football players. Not so, as Chuck O'Connor stated, "Playing in the rain and mud is an advantage to our team. The ball is a little hard to hold on to, but basically it's easy to play in the rain."

After the game there was a dance held in the gym. The music was so loud that it sounded like a live band. The dance was sponsored by Pryamid and Scott Randby and Brad Nelson acted as D.J.'s.

Gold and red helmets clash as Scott Clafflin wrestles the ball to the mucky ground. Chuck O'Connor pushes himself up to meet the oncoming Greyhound player.

The loss of the game to East put a damper on the football team's spirits, as shown here by Jim Paquette and Dale Odegard as they pause a moment before going into the locker room.

Despite the rain and the cold weather fans in the rowdie section still enjoy the game by cheering and throwing confetti.

What a Day for Showing Our Colors

Maroon and Gold Day, October 9, was a day to remember. Many preparations went into making it a success. To have room to work, seniors, juniors, and sophomores made decorations at local churches. Almost everyone went home spattered with school colors.

Besides making and arranging decorations, there were other Maroon and Gold traditions followed that week. Booster Club held their annual spaghetti dinner. Wade Stadium parking lot was the site of the bonfire Thursday night which fired up everyone for the next day.

Friday's events started off with the pep assembly at 10 a.m. Power Board, DAFA, Pryamid and some teachers entertained students with skits. Union's rendition of Robin Hood, called "Robin Hunter," surprised many when a horse appeared on stage.

Of course, our high-spirited cheerleaders livened things up with cheers and a "There's Nothing I'd Rather Be" skit. Pom-pom girls performed to "Basin Street Blues" and the Flagtwirlers whirled to "Salsol Hustle."

Several standing ovations indicated a superb performance by all groups. Spirits raised, students anticipated the last event of the week — the Maroon and Gold game.

To show her school spirit, Janet Lahti helps with decorating the hallways in maroon and gold streamers.

HI-DAY: Victory Again!

Excitedly, the crowd roared as the football cleared the goalpost; this three-point field goal broke the tie and won the game!

During the second half, Hunter fans experienced additional excitement: Dan Burud's car caught fire. Perhaps this fired up the Hunters for a 17-14 Hi-Day victory.

Following the game, the first dance of the season proved to be another big hit. Punk rockers provided a unique atmosphere and helped motivate the crowd.

"Do you know why the Central Trojan's mother had all her children's teeth extracted? So they would have more gum to chew!" That's how Power Board started the Hi-Day assembly on Friday, September 18.

But the pep assembly was far from "peppy." Homeroom seating separated friends, creating a somewhat dead setting. As Senior Theresa Walczynski put it,

"Nothing seems like much fun when you are being told what to do, and where to sit."

But the show went on. Everything from the faculty "Morbid Tabernacle" choir singing "Hello Students," to the Flagtwirlers' "Rock Around the Clock," to the A-frame built by the cheerleaders added variety.

Over all, it was a day packed with excitement, topped off with another Hunter victory.

Gladly lending a helping hand to his fellow teammate, John Foucault skillfully tapes Jim Borash's broken shoe.

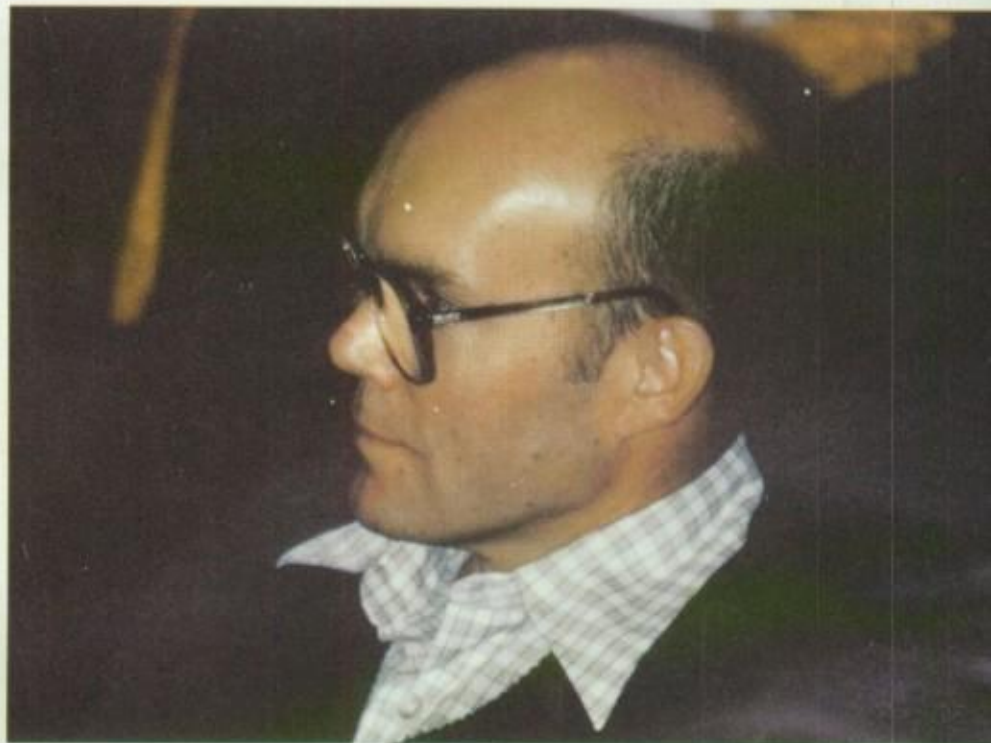

Enthusiastically kicking to the beat of the music are Denfeld's very own Pom Pom Girls. Dancing to "Gemini Dream" by The Moody Blues is the Pom Pom squad's talented contribution to the entertainment at the Hi-Day assembly.

Telling another traditional "Hunter Sicky" is Power Board's Nancy Malander, vice president, and Tammi Porter, president. Putting on the Hi-Day assembly and sponsoring the evening's dance are only two of Power Board's many responsibilities.

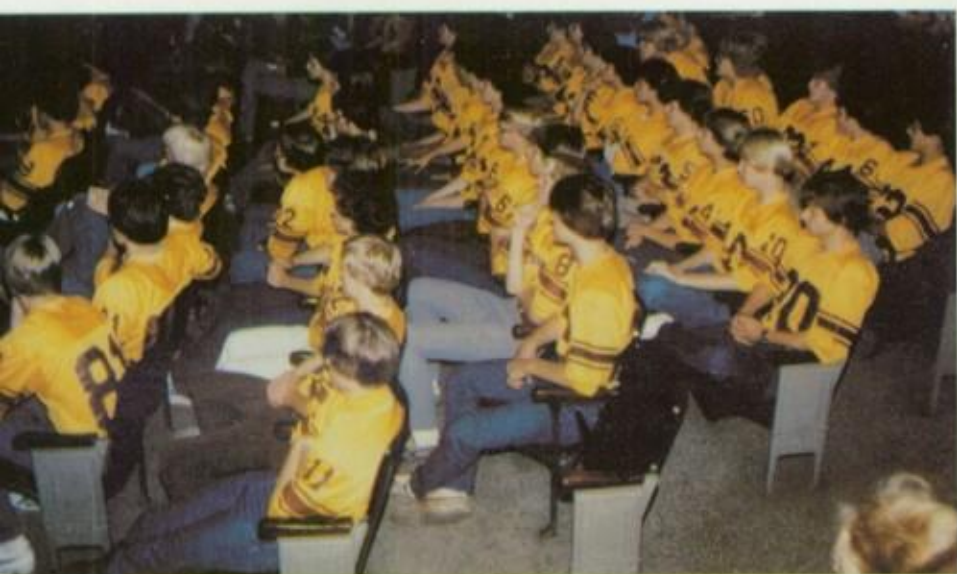

Caught in a pensive moment is football Coach Marvin Heikkinen. Is he strategically planning some plays for tonight's game?

Enthusied football fans and rowdies cheer their team on to a victory over the Central Trojans. The Hunters fought a tough battle with their rivals, but pulled through it with an overtime win!

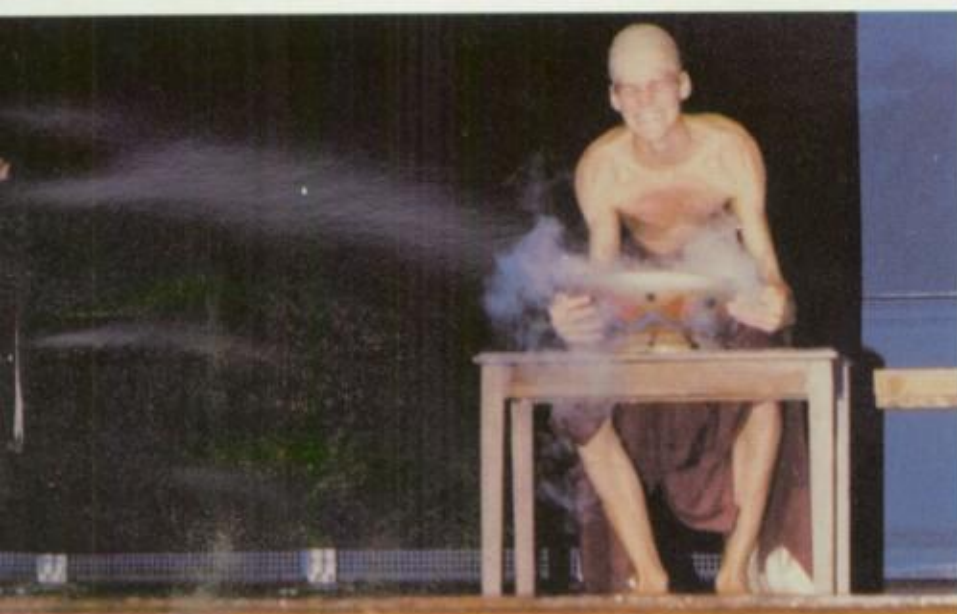

Attentively watching the pep assembly are several members of the football team. Could it be that their anxiety is building for tonight's big game?

Preparing for a rough game, the fearless Denfeld Hunters gather together to form their fighting forces.

Demonstrating his strength and ability in a Union skit is Sam Kirby, vice president. The skit, a take-off from "Kung Fu," displayed the hard work put into it.

Do you remember Skyline Parkway, Park Point, or your favorite movie theater's parking lot?

After school jobs held a high priority with many students. With busy work schedules and homework demands, the task of earning money became a challenge to students. After a hard evening's work it was difficult to get up with the 6:30 a.m. alarm clock.

You have probably heard, "I work at a pizza place," or "I wait on tables," but how many times have you heard, "I work in a funeral home"? Difficult, strange, impossible, scary are the words that come to mind when thinking about this job.

Last classes having been endured students anticipated other activities. Practices, cruisin', jobs, and chowing down were just a few.

Anyone who has ever participated in any sporting event, play or musical group has practiced. Determination and hard work went into those practices.

Cruisin' was a neat way to spend an afternoon. But with high gas prices it seemed extravagant. Maintaining a car proved even more difficult. Still cruisin' took place.

Life After Hours

Chowing down came naturally to most students. Whether it was after a football game or a hard test, food came in somewhere. Favorite Hunter places to eat included Hardee's, Taco John's, Pizza Hut, Kentucky Fried Chicken, and Dairy Queen. Fast food won out in most cases perhaps due to the necessity to eat and run off to the next activity.

Whatever the activity students kept themselves busy after hours.

To Brent Finley these words didn't apply. "Would you believe, I called them up for the job? Preparing and transporting the deceased were major parts of his job. "It was really pretty easy," Brent said. He decided to change jobs, though, when a new manager tried to cut his pay.

Not all the students held jobs. "Come on and hurry up we have to get home and watch our soap operas?" yelled Kathy Johnson and Sue Gates, both seniors, at the bus driver. Kathy Johnson said, "I watch General Hospital because of Luke Spencer and his mad affairs." Sue Gates said, "I turn it on as soon as I get in the door."

Cooking is a delicious way to spend an afternoon. Scott Young has been working at the Chinese Lantern three years.

Dancing her spare time away is possible! Carla Cuzzo has been dancing for ten years and now helps her mother teach dancing. "I like working with the little kids," Carla said smilingly. Nicolle Chaffee, Kristen Wick and Stephanie Anderson try hard.

Favorite spot to eat lunch is Hardee's. Mike Olson, Lynette Dalbec, and Laurie are chowing down.

Gossiping, practicing, working, eating, and resting are all a part of the panelled lobby after hours.

Earning his dough is Bob Bourdeau at Dave's Pizza. The senior is spinning the dough to make it big enough for a pizza.

Computer Programming for junior Glen is one way to spend an afternoon.

At Pom Pom practice, Lori Loukes and Mary Stenstrom discuss a heavy topic.

Drumming in a band is a different way to earn money. Dan Puglisi warms up with Handmade.

We're Looking You Over

If you were the typical Denfeld student, you had blue eyes. You were 5'7½" and you weighed precisely 125 pounds. Partying with friends or watching television was how you spent your free time. Your preferred sport to play and watch was football.

When you went to the football game, your Pioneer stereo stayed tuned to 102.5 KZIO and you listened to REO Speedwagon while you waited for your favorite song, "Endless Love."

After the football game you treated yourself to a favorite movie, "Stripes." The weekend passed all too quickly and it was back to school Monday on the bus.

In tallying the survey, oddities appeared. Students had more green private eyes, than hazel. WEBC couldn't hold on tight and, in fact, was not even mentioned. And Eddie Rabbit wasn't the only one taking it step by step. More students walked than drove or got a ride. Was this due to gas and insurance prices or was it due to reviving a trend . . . having something to tell your grandchildren?

Favorite Song

1. "Endless Love"
2. "The Stroke"
3. "Urgent" tied with "Theme from Arthur"

On early mornings or late afternoon, in rain, snow, or freezing cold, students waited for this white, green and blue striped vehicle to carry them to and from school.

The Muppet Show

"It's time to play the music. It's time to light the lights. It's time to get things started on the Union Muppet Show tonight." Union members sang this theme for the annual Union Vodvil talent show.

After long hours of practice and a night at dress rehearsal, outstanding performances made Vodvil a great success! Music varied from the mellow sounds of The Ray Baker singers performing "Fame," to the rock group "Bondage." Making her singing debut was Pamm DeGrio in "Hit me with your best shot."

Playing "William Tell Overture," Scott Berg and his retainer became the center of attention. "The Sounds of Silence," done by Tim Mlodozynec and Dave Stolen put the audience in a very relaxed mood.

To make Vodvil possible, stagehands were needed. Mike Fechner, one of the lighting specialists, stated, "Sure, it was pretty much work, but it was a great show!"

With shirt sleeves supposedly ripped by millions of fans, Scott Fitzsimmons convinces the audience he's "The Entertainer."

At Its Peak

Crooks, gangsters, cowboys, and Indians; at first sight, a visitor may have taken one look and run for his gun or his life. But wait! An imposter displayed his make-believe "Crook and Gangster Day" disguise. February 22, 1982 marked the first official day of Snow Week.

The previous Friday, February 19 was a warm-up day in preparation for the week to come. Students dressed in sweatsuits of every style imaginable. Monday also included a three-legged race and arm wrestling matches after school to add to the day of fun.

Ah, but only two days had passed. Tuesday followed with a "Day at the Beach," complete with beach balls, blankets and bare legs. An afternoon water balloon toss dared some participants.

A Preppie Wednesday came next, and students proudly displayed their spiffy fashions. Everything from beat shoes to alligator shirts were seen down the halls. Snow Week would not be complete without a snowman-making contest and a wacky relay after school.

Thursday followed, as "Roman Day," which turned out to be more of a toga and pajama day. Brave students exhibited stylish togas and favorite pj's to their peers. The day ended with a Rubik's Cube contest for skilled competitors.

Snow Week peaked on Friday, with "Punk and Nerd Day." Greased and/or colored hair added the perfect touch to the wild outfits seen throughout the halls. A messy pie-eating contest in the cafeteria wrapped up the last day of an exciting week.

Always and Forever

Lights Out! At 8:30 coronation was to begin but a power failure slightly delayed events.

The arches, containing many colors of the rainbow, decorated and added to the scheme in the Denfeld gym for Homecoming 1982. The theme, "Always and Forever," was appropriate as young courting couples danced the evening away to the terrific sounds of "Almond Brandy."

Former King and Queen, Tom Kero and Julie Nelson, crowned Tony Kopari and Karen Walczynski at the coronation, Saturday, January 30, 1982.

First selected by students, candidates then were screened by faculty members. Scholastic and extra-curricular achievements determined eligibility.

This year, Homecoming was held sometime earlier and didn't quite reach the expected turnout. Perhaps because Homecoming was no longer held in the Fall or perhaps because there was no game involved to draw alumni, Homecoming did not hold its revered place in Denfeld High School tradition.

Accepting her crown from former Queen Julie Nelson, Karen Walczynski is congratulated with hugs and tears from her court: Karen Swanson, Lori Gustafson, Barb Bauman, Kris Edblad, Shelly Cook, Patti Lindquist.

Surrounded by royalty, Jim Borash, Karl Randa, and Jim Hansen, Tony Kopari accepts the title and crown of Homecoming King from former King Tom Kero.

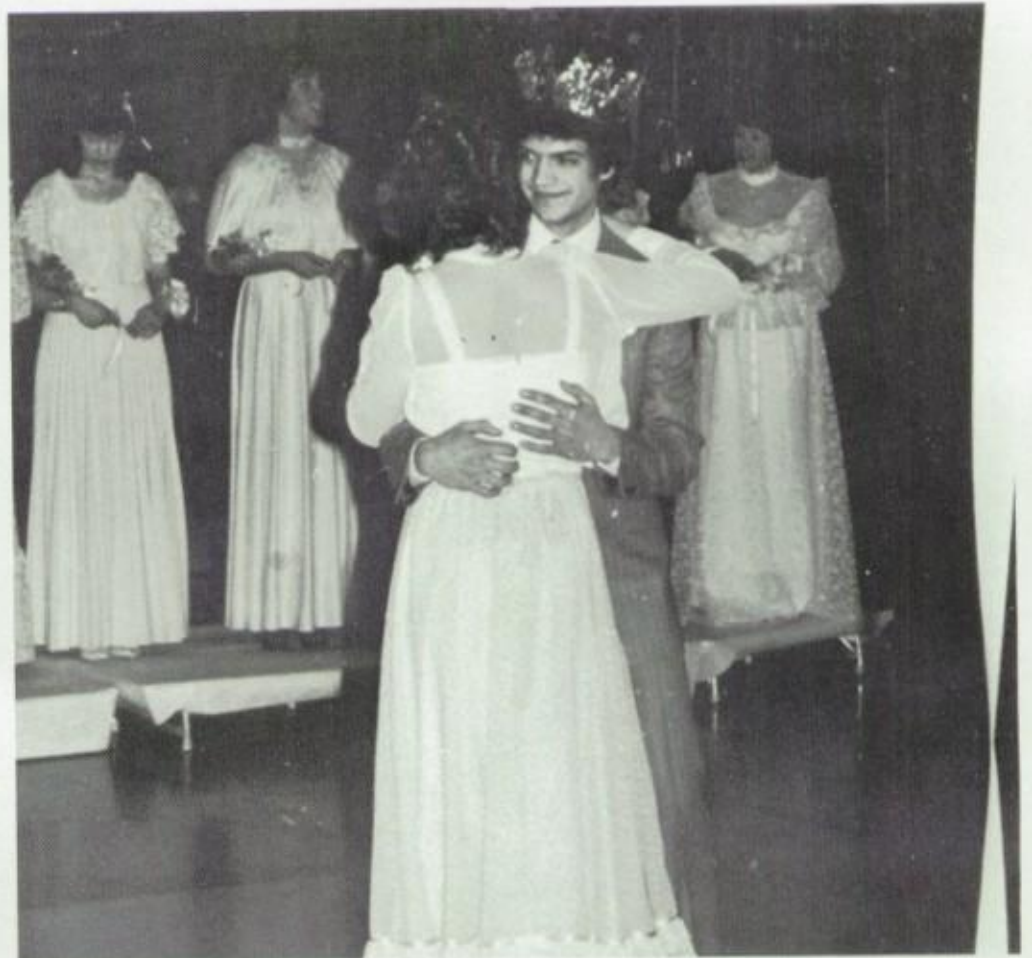

Adorable helpers, Lindsey and LeeAnn Pekkala, carry the crowns for the ceremony.

"Almond Brandy" set the mood at Homecoming by playing a variety of music.

Soft lights and the mellow theme music, "Always and Forever" help to create a sentimental moment for Karen Walczynski and Tony Kopari during the traditional dance of royalty.

Sharing a radiant glow, the 1982 Homecoming King and Queen, Tony Kopari and Karen Walczynski reign graciously over the remainder of the evening.

To relax and share quiet moments, couples gather at the punch bowl and tables.

Proceeding under the arches to the royal platform, are Homecoming candidates Shelly and Cook and Kevin Rodlund.

The best. Use it to describe musicians like Rick Springfield, Eddie Rabbitt, Kenny Rogers, and Kim Carnes. Reserve it for someone with the wit of Rona Barrett, the steadiness of Walter Cronkite, the wisdom of Dear Abby, and the toughness of Muhammad Ali. The best. Keep it for songs like "Endless Love," "Bette Davis Eyes," and "Celebration." Qualify it to mean actresses like Sissy Spacek, actors like Robert DeNiro, and films like "Ordinary People." Save it for coaches like Vince Lombardi, Bear Bryant, and our Denfeld coaches.

The coaches — demanding yet gentle, firm yet fair — had the rare gift of caring enough to make every student want to do their very best — in sports, in class, in life.

There were not only the coaches; there were the athletes. Their drive and determination to do their best at every event proved to be the catalysts. Long hours of work and fine coaching reaped rewards.

Moreover, off the rink, the playing field, and the court we found the true spirit of sports. Athletes met in such groups as DAFA and FCA. In such groups young men and women united and supported not only the school but each other.

There's No Place Like Home

Everybody knows there's no place like home, and nobody knew it better than the football team with losing the first two games of the season out of town. This seemed to dampen some fan's spirits, but things certainly turned around when Jim Hansen kicked a 26-yard field goal in overtime against Central to give the Hunters their first victory of the season.

"There was a lot of competition for positions," said Coach Heikkinen. "The seniors worked really hard but the juniors had more athletic ability."

"Many of us seniors felt that we didn't get a fair shot because so many of the positions were taken by juniors" said Captain Rod Zivkovich. "Our season didn't go well and the Duluth City Conference was pretty close but everyone in the city was having a bad year."

Three knee injuries and two ankle injuries slowed down the season. In the final game, the Hunters lost only by a touchdown to Hibbing. The City Conference Championship Title was regained and the Hunters ended up with a third-place tie in the Northern Lakes Conference. The season was finished with a 4-5 record.

"Next year's team should be really good," said Captain Gary Andrews. "With Morgan Park coming over, there should be some really good athletes."

B-Squad Rate Teamwork "10"

"All right you bunch of girls! Lower! Don't bend those knees! That's it. Three laps! Let's go." Is that how the B-squad football team got into shape? That's how Robbie Kreth described getting into shape for football. He thought a high point of the season was practice. When asked what he thought was the high point, Dave Waisanen said, "Probably our first four games because I think we really did good!"

When team members rated themselves on defense they felt it was about the same as offense. If points were given they'd take a seven. As for teamwork they agreed on a rating of ten.

Vince Stalling and Brett Hayes were asked how the team psyched themselves up and most of them stated they sang and goofed around. But Brett Hayes said he sat and did a lot of thinking.

Vince explained, "Inexperience was a bit of a problem because we really didn't know each other or what to do, but we did work hard."

Whatever Coach Heik and the B-squad did during those workouts resulted in some spectacular victories. With B-squad defeating Hibbing this year, perhaps next year will show a change of final positions in the Northern Lakes Conference.

Bigger Falls Harder

"The bigger they are the harder they fall." The old adage didn't apply to the opponents of the Hunters. Size became a dominant factor in each game. Hunters showed dominance with their great defense and teamwork. Facing rough competition throughout the season each player gave his all to win. This was important to make a team successful.

For the spectator buying a bag of popcorn and finding a good spot in the bleachers were the first steps in preparing for an exciting game of basketball.

Starting the evening off a player did freethrow practice, shooting from outside, and passing drills. These pre-game warmups shook off jitters and tension inside. Tension again tightened during player introduction and reached a climax just before the tip-off.

Every player experienced a bad night occasionally; legs felt like rubber, fingers turned into butter, or shots flew just off target. Even though the team had a few off nights, their winning games were much more numerous.

The team and coaching staff received a lot of ink from the local press, with individual recognition to Mark Fox and Bob Balaich for their outstanding ability.

The season was finished with a win over Cathedral leaving the record at 11-6.

Improving enough to play on the varsity team was the goal of a junior varsity player.

In November 10 to 12 kids were selected from tryouts and given a jersey. Then the players who performed well during the junior varsity games were moved up to the varsity squad.

Two and a half hours a day each week were spent reviewing and perfecting plays and skills. A daily practice consisted of a routine warmup, followed by some time spent on shooting, learning offensive and defensive plays, and drills to improve basic fundamentals of dribbling, passing, and rebounding.

In order for the team to prepare for a game the first step would be to look at the team scheduled to be played, and then decide what areas of offense and defense to use in order to be successful. According to the scoreboard, the team proved to be just that!

Hustle! Desire! Win!

She awoke to a six a.m. alarm and stumbled into her maroon and gold practice clothes. After eating an athlete's breakfast consisting of cereal, toast, orange juice and cocoa, she arrived at Denfeld in time for seven a.m. practice. In a cold gym filled with sleepy teammates practice got under way. Her day started off with working on offensive patterns.

Starting October 9, basketball members began each day this way — practice. They practiced not only in the morning but the afternoon too. Each girl spent almost twelve hours that first week just for basketball. Describing those first practices in only three words, Patti Cibuzar said smilingly, "Run, run, run."

Sharyl Beaudin remembered, "We were really fired up."

Coach Dick Swanson inspired the Hunter girls. "It is fulfilling to watch kids mature and execute under pressure what they've been taught."

His main goals for the season were to play up the teams' abilities and to be competitive at tournament time. He felt the tournaments could be won by anybody if they were playing well.

"Basketball is a battle against the game itself as much as anything. It is a constant striving to play consistently at the highest level of proficiency possible." Dick Swanson's words repeated his philosophy as a coach.

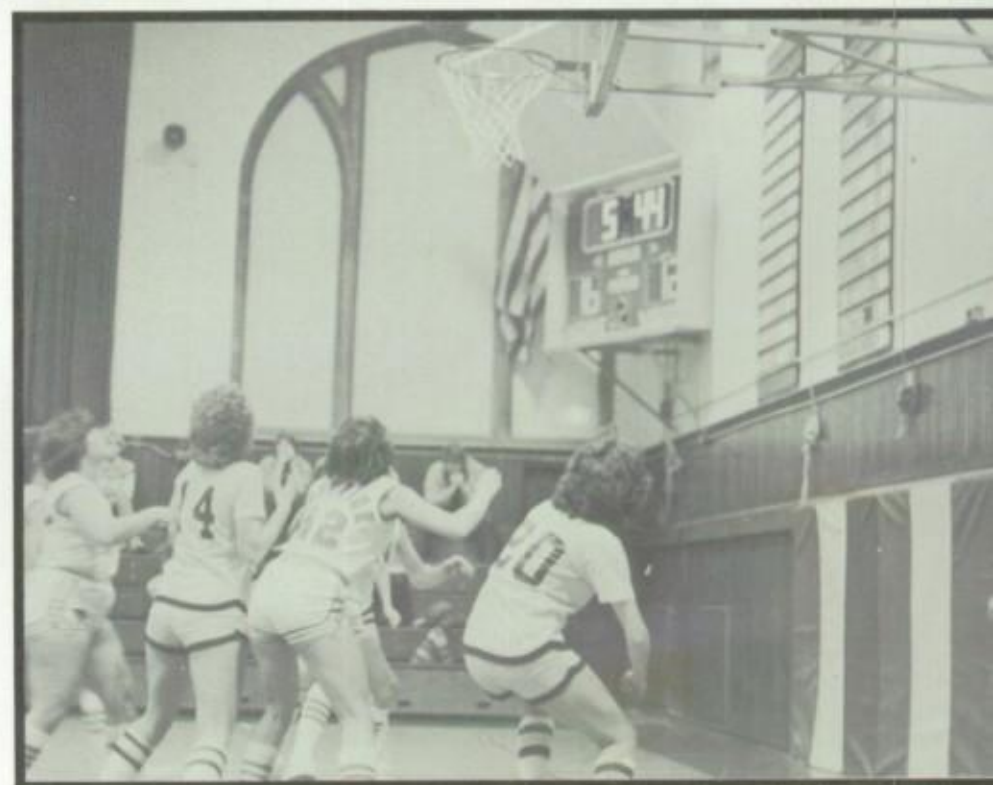

Through the highs and lows of the basketball season the team maintained its drive for the year.

Discussing strategy between the junior varsity and varsity games are coaches Dick Swanson, Mike Scignoli, and Warren Peterson.

We've Only Just Begun

Caught in a trap a girl from Morgan Park looks for an open teammate as Laurie Overlie and Suzy Thompson keep her tied up.

Will it go in? During the game at Morgan Park the players anticipate the rebound anxiously.

Tension, nervousness, and worried looks prevailed on the faces of the junior varsity girls as they sat on the bench and waited their turn to play.

Intently watching the game, the girls tried to visualize themselves executing the new plays they had learned.

Their apprehension grew from the fact that the high school basketball experience was more complex than what they had experienced in elementary and junior high.

Assisting Head Coach Dick Swanson, Warren Peterson and Mike Scignoli, both Denfeld graduates, led the junior varsity girls.

"I love the game," said Warren Peterson in response to why he chose to coach girls' basketball.

Playing basketball to win required equal amounts of finesse and contact. The game did not demand roughness as much as knowing the moves.

The junior varsity had a slow start due to inexperience but once the newness wore off the season really started rolling.

With hard work and persistence these girls advanced themselves in the Denfeld Girls' Basketball program.

Sitting on the bench during a time out, Warren Peterson shows a play to the five players ready to go back on the floor.

Blustering Winds

Having enough snow wasn't a problem on the trails and slopes. Snow storms and below freezing temperatures plagued the season. Skiers, however, still made it to the slopes and raced to success.

There was no sign of the alpine team lacking unity as they went to a victorious season winning the Duluth City Championship. "It is the first time in at least 10 years that East has been defeated the City Champions," said Coach Steve LeTourneau. He explained that Denfeld's winning effort resulted from the entire team being outstanding. The Alpine team also defeated all other teams in their conference.

The cross country team, however, lacked numbers. "Overall the team didn't finish as well as they could have," stated Coach Dave Bartel. "Even though we didn't make any records, we still made it to every meet."

Young Team Gains Experience

As the Zamboni made its final sweep around the Arena's rink, Hunter fans waited with anticipation for their team. The team comprised the youngest ever coached by Mr. Bob Hill during his twelve years at Denfeld. Nine sophomores, five juniors, and only six seniors made the team roster.

When asked to comment on how it felt to be starting goalie when he was only a sophomore, Tom Crossmon replied, "Great! I'm just lucky to have such a great team in front of me."

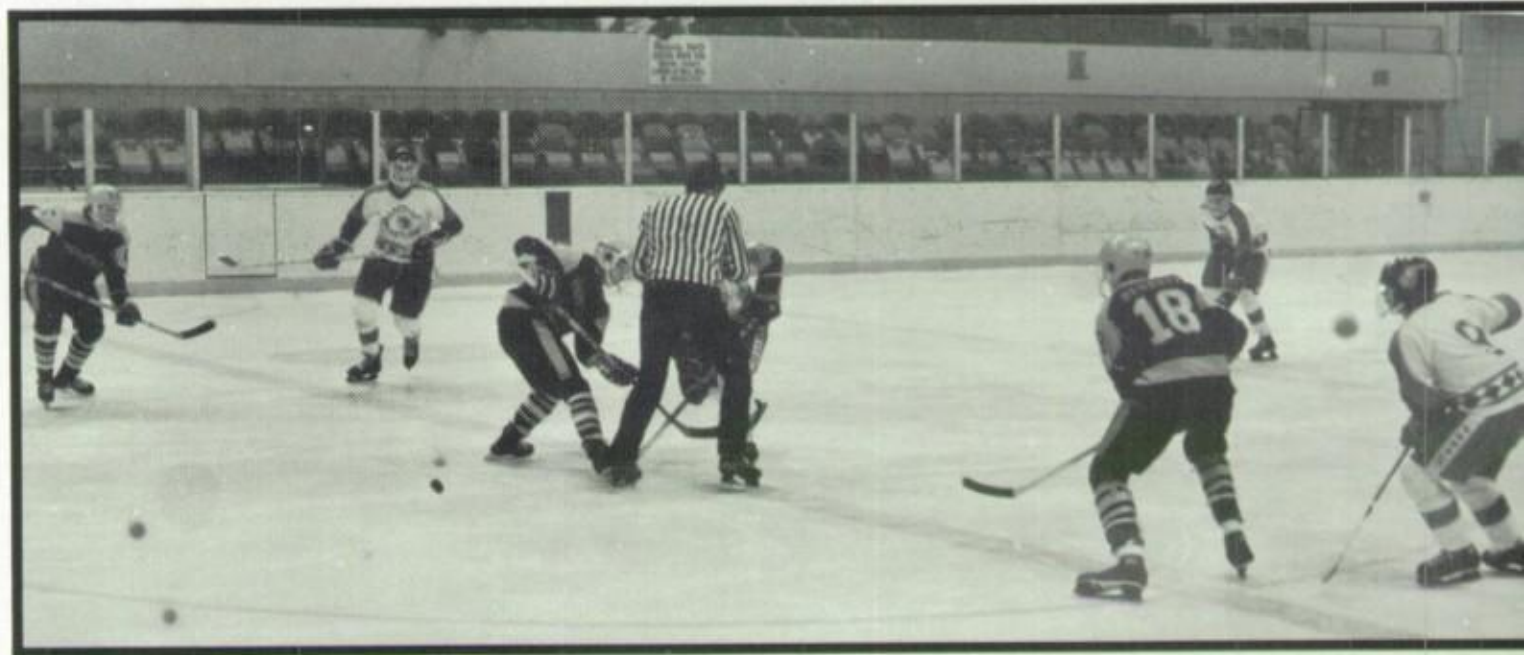

"All in all I think we had a good season and gained valuable experience for next year," said Scott Bennett, junior right wing.

Boring Is The Last Word . . .

Boring is one adjective that is not applied to hockey. Fast-paced, exhilarating, even violent, but never boring.

When Denfeld's B-Squad hockey team beat Morgan Park 8-5 in the last period, fans certainly weren't bored. Nor were they bored when they lost a close game to Cloquet 3-2. At most every game from the beginning of the season until the end, fans saw good hockey being played.

Although the team was the youngest it's ever been, they had many strong points. After a lot of practice and hard work, those points began to work for them.

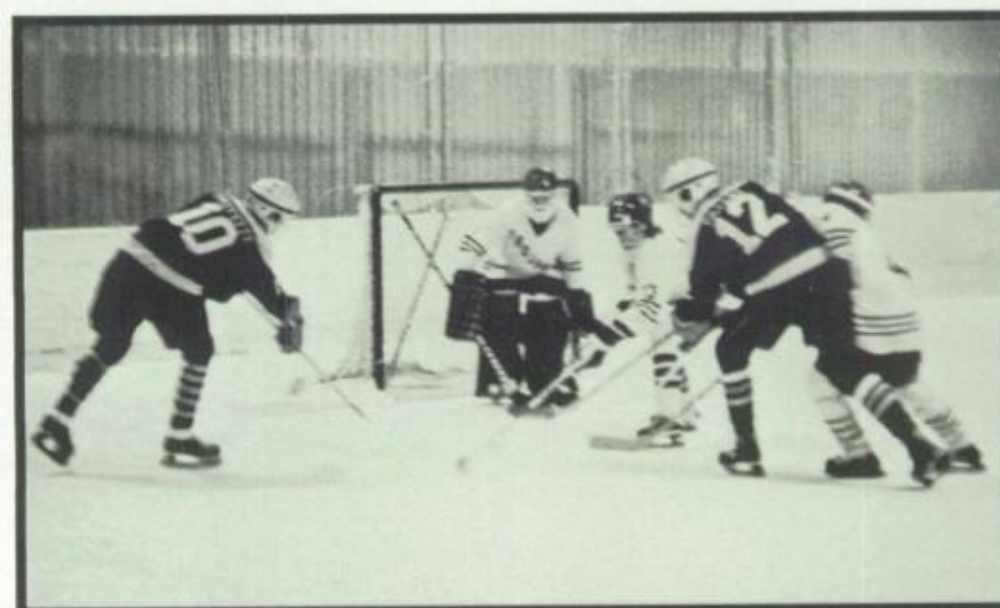

Commenting on the team and their season, Coach Dukes Knutson said, "I'm very satisfied with the success we had this season, and I've got as much pride in this year's B-team as I've had in any. They demonstrated a lot of determination and hard work all year. Even in defeat, they never gave up."

The B-squad's season included a third place finish in the Cloquet Christmas Tournament, and a seven game winning streak.

All for Fun, Fun for All

Just to have fun with sports, students got involved with intramurals. How did intramurals work? It consisted of four sports: football which lasted from October-November; volleyball, from December-January; floor hockey, from February-March; and basketball, in April.

Students who played had to sign up, organize their teams, and assign a captain. Intramural adviser, Mr. Dukes Knutson, would then draw up a playing schedule so the teams could play each other.

The games were mostly played on Mondays and Wednesdays, after school and evenings. This year football had a better turnout than in past years. When asked if he could make one change in intramurals, Knutson said, "I'd like to see more sportsmanship and respect in intramural competition. There was too much arguing and bickering especially in basketball. Some kids are so intent on winning that it sometimes spoils the fun for others."

One thing that intramurals didn't have which other sports did was the constant emphasis on winning. About 150 students enjoyed this pressureless competition in intramurals, which was sponsored by Union. The main goal was just to play the game and have fun with it.

With all eyes on the ball, this bump is sure to score.

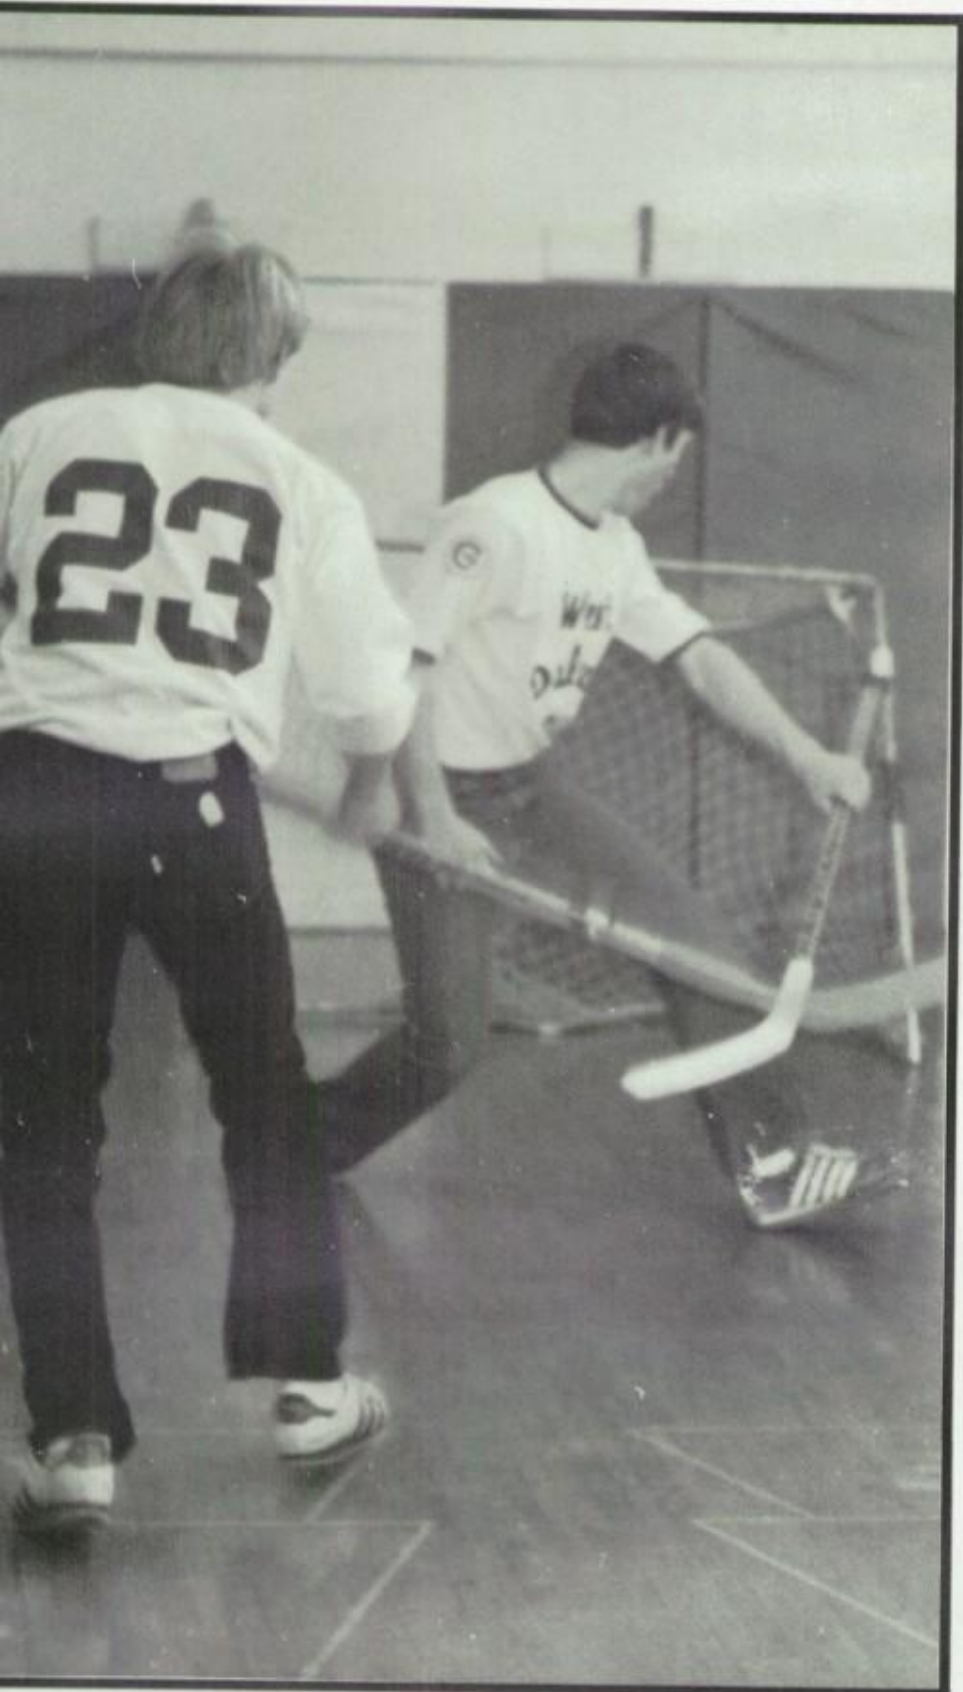

Gazing through the net, Shelly Cook's opponents see her wind up for a powerful serve.

Ready to volley the oncoming ball back over the net are Shelly Cook and Denise Weiss.

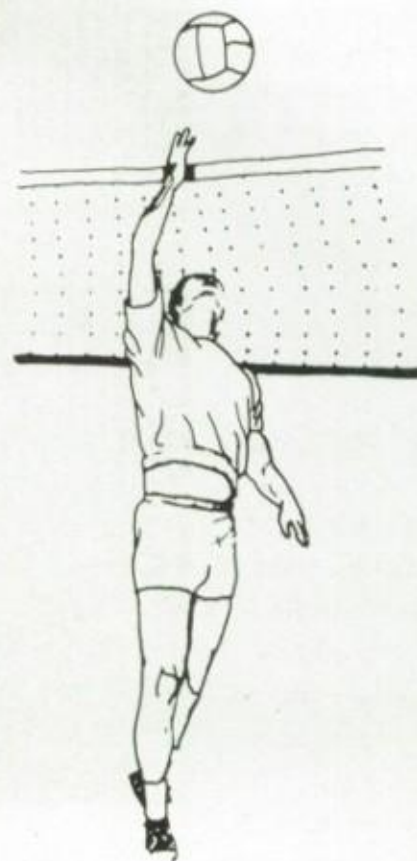

After giving a strong underhand serve, Brenda Lennon waits in suspense to see if the ball will clear the net.

Scoring is the object of the game in floor hockey. Jim Abrahamson gets one in on Goalie Bill Kero.

While waiting for intramural football to begin, Tammi Porter, Brian LaFlair, Doug Cran, Brenda Yearly, Terrie LaDean, and Jim Slaviero practice some plays.

Combining the Denfeld and Morgan Park girls' swim teams proved to be a plus for the teams. The teams' 7-6 win-loss record demonstrated their improvement over last year when Denfeld's record was 4-14 and Morgan Park's was 2-14. Capturing the fourth place position in the Lake Superior Conference meet and fifth place in the Regional meet served to cement the bonds between the 20 team members.

Not only did the combination prove beneficial, but one girl from each school — Deanna Rapp from Denfeld and Val McDonald from Morgan Park — qualified for the state meet. It was held in Minneapolis on December 4 and 5. "The season went very well with very few problems. The morale and motivation of the girls was excellent," commented Coach Fred Gustafson.

Many school records were broken by each of the combined teams. Morgan Park set new records in four events and Denfeld set records in five events — a total of eight out of eleven events.

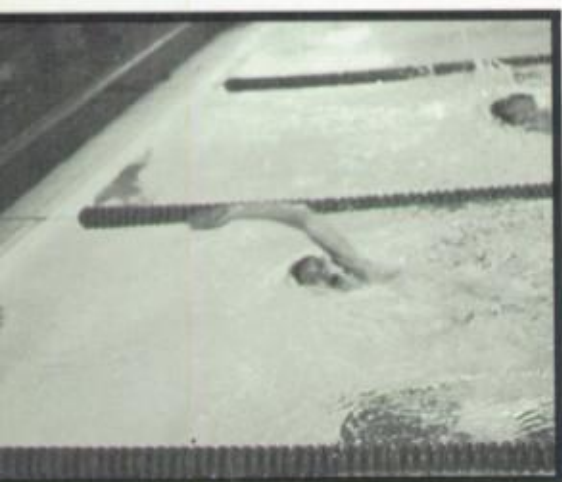

To build strength and self discipline within members of the boys' swim team, practices were held at 6 a.m. and in the afternoon after school.

Complementing each other, the Denfeld and Morgan Park teams combined to be a strong contender in eleven events of the Lake Superior Conference. Weak areas in Denfeld's team, like the 100 yard butterfly and relays, were filled by Morgan Park's team members and vice versa.

Even the change of coaches in mid-season couldn't tarnish the winning streak. Mr. Fred Gustafson started out as coach and was replaced by Mr. Frank Crassweller.

Before the swim meet at Morgan Park against East, Dave Nelson contemplates the advice from Coach Fred Gustafson on the positions for executing his six dives.

Bump . . . Set . . . Spike!

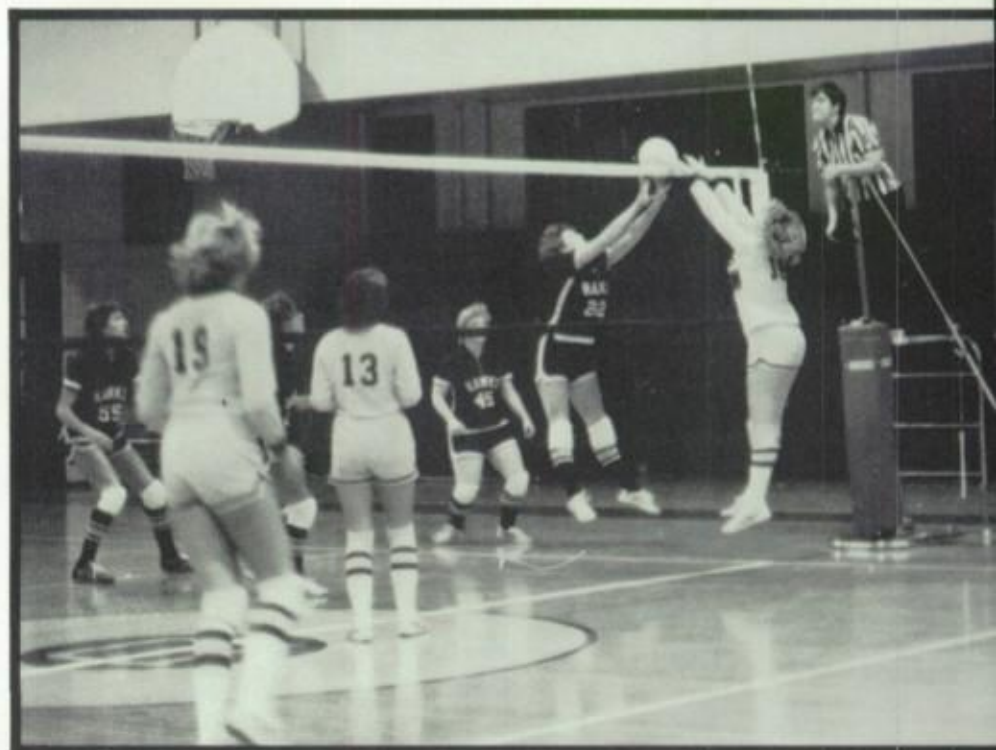

Early last summer, the Denfeld volleyball squad prepared for another season with high hopes and determination. But some tough opponents rained on their ball game. Things began to look a bit brighter as they won their seventh game of the season against Two Harbors.

For the third year in a row, the team was invited to the Virginia Invitational Tournament. They had never won a match in this tournament until they placed fourth out of eight teams. The season roller-coasted through more wins and losses ending up with a 4-15 record.

"Even though we didn't have a winning season, we got along well with each other and we had fun," commented Brenda Lennon.

To give the Hermantown Hawks a good spike, Brenda Lennon jumps to great heights.

During a timeout, Coach Jean Marchand discusses the strategy on the next few plays.

Off and Running

Running at Denfeld, Wheeler and various courses throughout the city, the cross country team began practicing everyday last August.

At the beginning of the year, Coach Doug MacIver believed the boy's varsity team had the potential to be in the top three or four schools in the region. Last year Denfeld had five runners in the State meet and had almost always captured one or two titles. This year Coach MacIver was very pleased to sweep all three titles: Lake Superior Conference, Twin Ports Championship, and Regions. Though the team had a disappointing State meet, they had a very exciting season.

The girls on the cross country team showed improvement during the year. They changed from runners into racers. Coach MacIver said, "All that the girls lacked was one top runner to win their meets."

Success in any activity needs hard work, enthusiasm and determination. The cross country team proved the essence of this in their performance.

While hearing the pounding of feet, Doug Cran tries to squeeze his way between two opponents at the finish of the Swain Invitational.

Taking the opportunity, like other racers, to warm up before their race are Lynn Tuttle and Mary Hable.

er finishing fourth in the junior high division of the Hibbing meet Dave Lerud chows down a well-deserved meal.

et," the starter yells. Varsity boys prepare for the piercing sound of the gun the grueling challenge ahead.

Sidelined with a stress fracture, Denny Legarde watches the race from a different viewpoint.

In order to protect it from further injury, Coach Doug MacIver tapes Gwen Rouleau's leg before the race.

New Coach, New Team

Another first! A soccer team was added to Denfeld's list of sporting events.

Practices, held almost every day after school at Irving field, began in September and lasted through November. The team, coached by Dave DeWitt, played games against area schools at Irving, Central and Stowe fields.

The girls' tennis team "Did pretty good," according to tennis team member Paula Plys. With Hank Axt as first-year coach of both boys' and girls' tennis teams, the girls' began practicing in August before school started.

Practicing three times a week, with meets at least twice a week, the girls were kept busy!

Practicing hard for an upcoming meet, are tennis team members Lynette Connors and Lucy Barlau.

Hockey manager, Joe Grover helps Goalie Tom Kasell prepare for a save as he fires the puck.

All work and no play tire a basketball manager. Taking a breather and setting up the music for basketball practice are Chuck Samuelson and Duane Dobs.

Building muscles with the leg press is as important to a football manager as well as the players. Chris Larrabee grimaces as he lifts the heavy weights.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL TEAM MANAGERS: Jill Johnson, Kelly Woollwever, Lori Gronlund, Sherri Moody, and Brenda Lennon.

Magnificent Managers

Managers have formed the backbone of the teams for many years. Our football, hockey, basketball, and baseball seasons wouldn't have been the same without them. These unsung heroes did various jobs from recording the plays to handling equipment.

When asked what were the best and the worst parts of being a team manager, Steve Mahoney replied, "Being involved with the team is the best. Some people aren't very athletic, so being a team manager allows participation. The worst part is that you're doing your part in a school activity, but some other people put you down or laugh."

Vince Stalling, manager of B squad hockey, stated, "Traveling with the team is the best part of being a manager."

The youngest manager, Jeff Bennett, an eighth grader from West Junior, was the football manager. Jeff's jobs ranged from carrying equipment to filling up the water jugs. Being the manager of football gave Jeff a chance to see how Denfeld football operated.

Not only boys were managers, girls had chances too. There were female managers for volleyball and girls' basketball.

These people encouraged and supported not only their teams, but their coaches too. "Mr. Hill and I have been truly blessed with outstanding managers," said Mr. Tom (Dukes) Knutson.

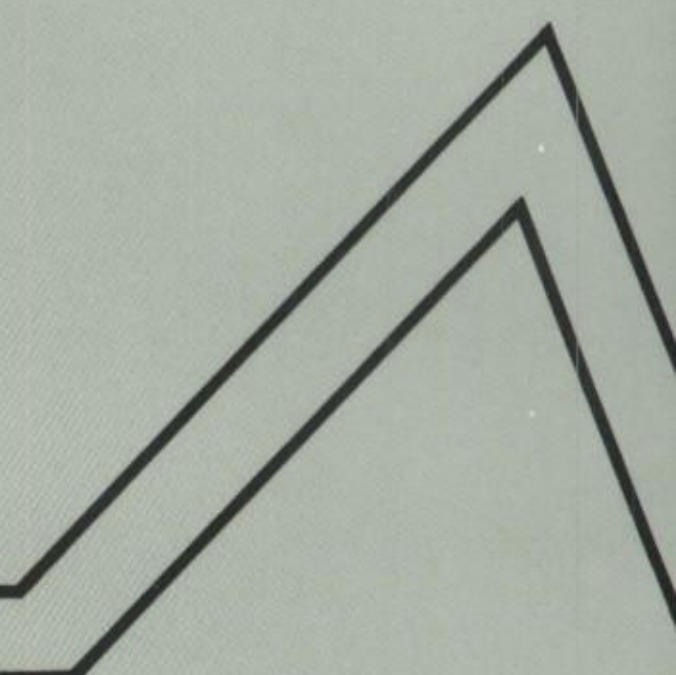

Handed a score sheet, Dave Nelson records girls' swim team results. The other managers are Ron Johnson, Ed Erchul, and Joe Erchul of Morgan Park.

Managers for the varsity and junior varsity volleyball teams are Sue Pearson and Kelly Tygeson.

Faculty

Teachers and administrators faced problems never before encountered by educators. Financial and societal pressures forced them to constantly evaluate and defend their teaching methods. The needs of an ever changing student body in a rapidly changing society encouraged them to search for innovative and effective approaches.

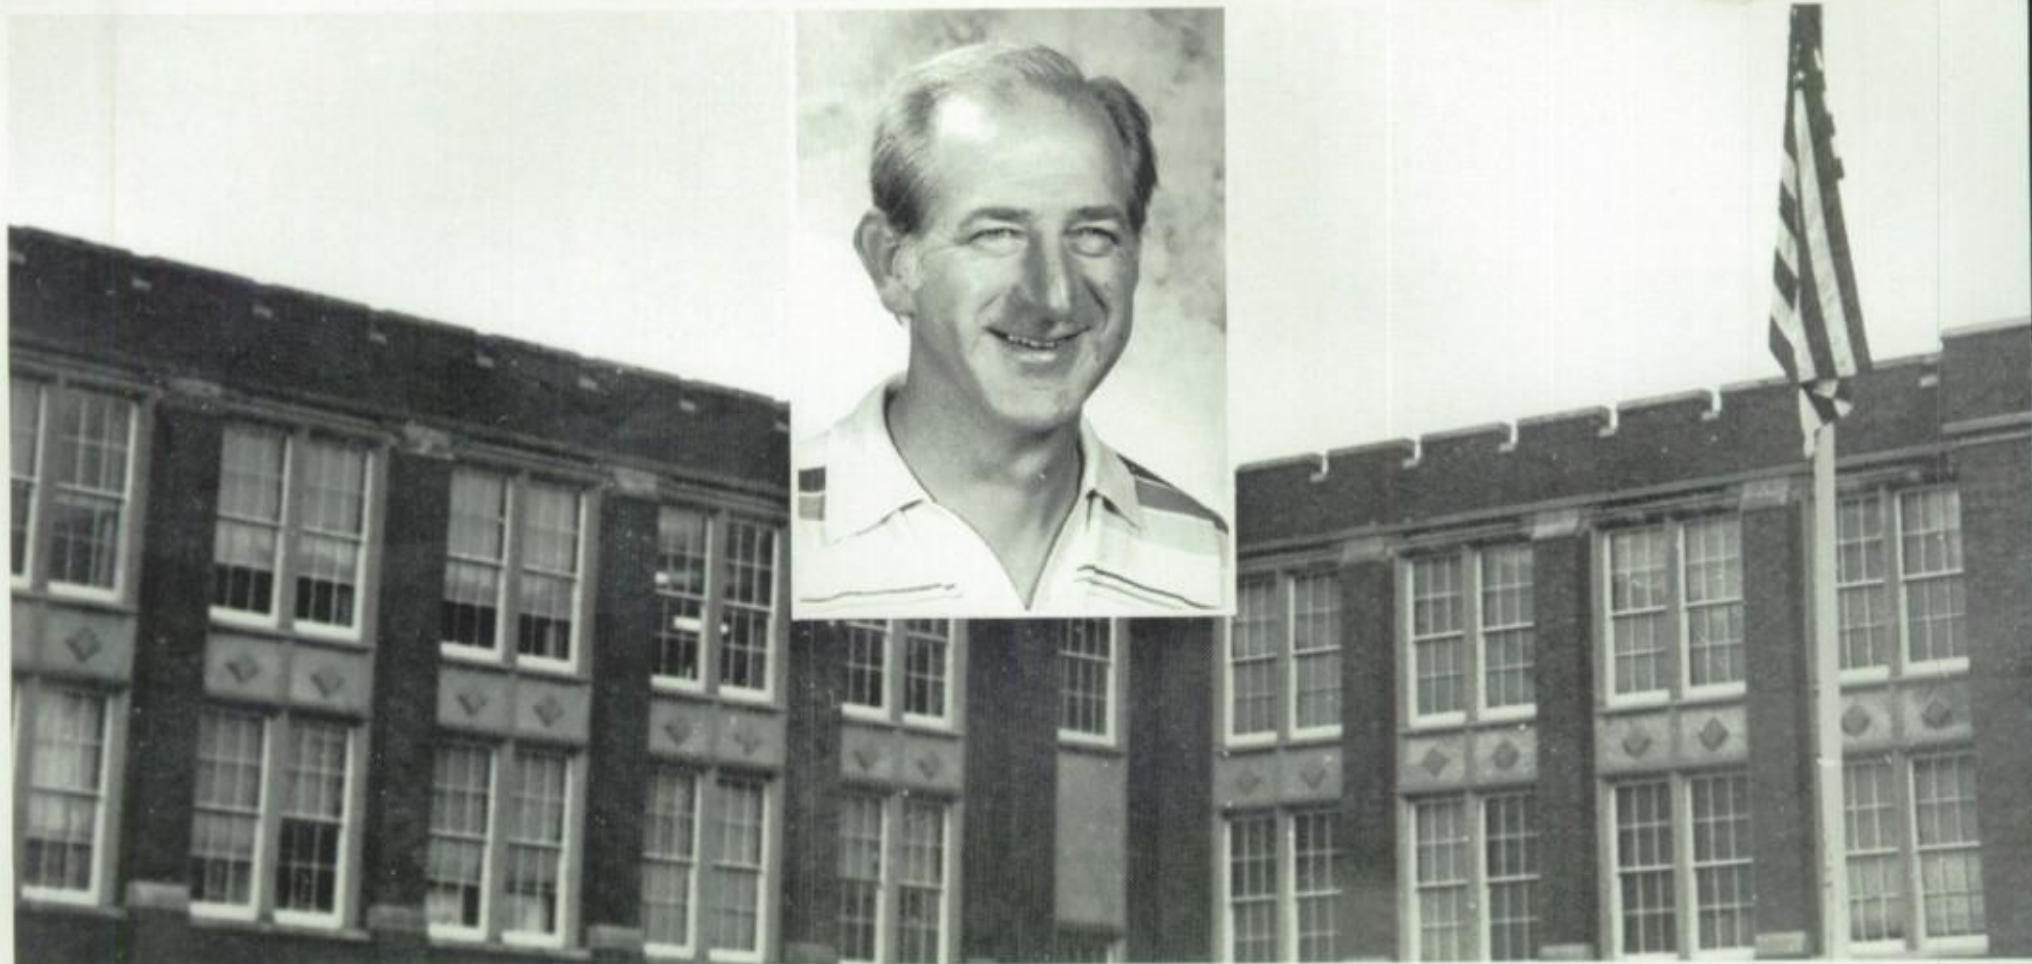

Each day presented problems that had to be solved. Dr. Wayne Samskar and Mrs. Marian Plewacki were two people who were determined to face the daily challenges. As administrators one of the demands of their positions was to determine school policy.

Dr. Samskar and Mrs. Plewacki dealt with individuals' problems and met with the school staff on an individual and a group basis to keep the school running smoothly. They also had work to do on the budget.

"One of the high points of my job would be if three or four weeks into the school year everything was running smoothly," said Mrs. Plewacki.

Dr. Samskar's most rewarding experience of the year was when he watched the seniors walk across the stage to receive their diplomas. These administrators represent only two of the many quality educators who sought to do their best for the students and the school.

Mr. Richard Hanson passed away Saturday, November 21, 1981 in St. Lukes Hospital. He died of a heart attack.

Mr. Hanson was a life-long resident of Duluth. He graduated from Denfeld in 1948. He attended UMD and received a masters degree from UWS. In 1961, he returned to Denfeld and taught math and science for 20 years.

Mr. Hanson was also a navy veteran of the Korean War. He raised three children.

Afternoon classes were dismissed so a number of students and faculty members could attend Mr. Hanson's funeral.

Mr. Hanson will be remembered as an individual who had a sense of humor, and a personality that won you over. His friendly smile is sadly missed but always remembered by students and faculty.

Seniors

After three years of struggling, frustrations, and many enjoyable memories, seniors believed they had arrived at a top step in life. Although seniors looked back at their school years knowing that the seemingly endless work was over, they knew a future faced them. This future held dreams, goals, work — yes, more steps.

The direction these steps will take them was toward college, vocational school, military services, and into the business world. Finishing high school was like getting to the top of a flight of stairs with many other flights and landings ahead. The interesting people and experiences to be had on the way encouraged each senior to continue the climb. Each must take those steps to reach the top or the attainment of his goal.

SENIOR CLASS OFFICERS: President, Kevin Rodlund; Secretary, Brenda Lennon; Vice President, Tim Mlodozyniec; Treasurer, Marcie Crain; Adviser, Miss Jean Endrizzi.

The Denfeld spirit was what foreign exchange student Jenny Kennedy enjoyed the most about Denfeld. She also appreciated the friendly people, the clubs, and the team spirit shown during the volleyball and basketball games that she played in.

Jenny was also interested in art. She enjoyed it as a hobby, but she also took it seriously. She may go into some form of art as a career, but she hasn't decided on anything yet. Jenny helped out the Oracle staff by drawing the cover design for the book. She felt really excited and proud to be doing it, and said she enjoyed it a lot.

How did juniors and sophomores take it from the top? Everyone has to be a beginner at one time or another. Sophomores took harrassment for a year before they became juniors. Juniors had to take instructions as well as teasing from their all-knowing elders — the seniors.

Although it was done in fun, a serious side always remained. We learned from those ahead of us. Traditions and spirit were passed on.

When sophomores became juniors, who became seniors, more than just academics were learned. Becoming a Denfeld Hunter took three years for perfection.

Dead muskrats! That's what they are. Junior Chris Pirkola traps them down by the bay after school and on weekends. After skinning them, he brings them to Cloquet where he receives four to five dollars for each one.

Laurie Bergman said. "After hearing each instrument play I decided that was what I wanted to play."

This spur of the moment decision has opened new doors in Laurie's life. "I'd like to go into music and I'll give it my best shot," said Laurie. Under the direction of her teacher, Alan Siebert, Principle trumpet in the Duluth-Superior Symphony Orchestra, she has already accomplished a great deal.

Laurie has been a member of the All State Orchestra, principle trumpet at Denfield, principle trumpet in the Duluth-Superior Youth Orchestra, a Member of Matinee Musical, an alternate in the Duluth-Superior Symphony Orchestra, and a student member of the International Trumpet Guild.

"I chose the trumpet for my instrument on the spur of the moment. After hearing the Lincoln Jr. High School Band perform at Piedmont Elementary," Junior Denny LeGarde has been boxing for five years.

Denny said his father, an ex-pro, and two of his brothers who are boxers had a big influence on his decision to box. Last year he won the National Indian Championship and also was Upper Midwest runner-up.

Denny's record was 56/6 and 16 knockouts. Denny hoped to extend his career and was contemplating turning pro.

"I enjoy running because it is a lot of fun to do with friends and it keeps me in shape," said Todd Swanson, top sophomore runner for the varsity cross-country team.

"I really don't think there are any words to describe the feeling I get when I run. It is just great." For Todd Swanson running is his high in life.

For downhill skiing at its best in the Midwest, ski Spirit Mountain! After a day on the slopes take a break and head inside the Chalet for drinks, a snack, dinner, and entertainment.

Spirit Mountain boasts not only of its downhill runs but the sophisticated snowmaking systems used to groom the hills.

Taking top honors for Midwest downhill skiing is not all; Spirit Mountain pleases cross-country skiers. Twelve kilometers of marked and groomed trails wind through the beautiful winter wilderness of Duluth.

Advertising is an important part of a yearbook. To finance a project as complicated and meaningful as a school's story, the community is asked to become involved. To the following supportive businesses, Denfeld's students are grateful.

Mr. Charles A. Hren, 50, former Denfeld football coach and athletic director, died February 12, 1982 of cancer in his home at 1222 Woodridge Circle.

Mr. Hren, born in Cleveland, Ohio, was an All-City and All-Twin Ports football selection as a halfback in 1947 and 1948 at Denfeld, where he played for Coach Walt Hunting and was considered one of the finest football players developed in the region during that era.

After graduating from Denfeld, he attended Northwestern University in Evanston, Illinois and played on the Wildcats' football teams 1950 through 1952.

Mr. Hren tried out for the Philadelphia Eagles of the NFL in 1953. He was a player-coach at Great Lakes Naval Training Center and later taught at Minot, North Dakota for one year before returning to Duluth to join the Denfeld staff in 1958.

Here he was head football coach from 1960 to 1971 and athletic director from 1971 to 1981. He also taught social studies.

Mr. Hren was a member of St. Benedict's Catholic Church, a Navy veteran of WW II, and a member of the Northwestern University Alumni Association.

He was married and had a son, Kevin, and two daughters, Laura and Kristy.

Quality Not Quantity

Why is it so important to have a good yearbook? The school year's story as told in a yearbook, affects many lives and hearts for years. The story had to be broad enough to cover the many activities and people. Yet the story had to intimately detail the numerous events.

The staff didn't take the responsibility lightly. It proved to be a big job, but we got the job done. "I spent so much time with them that I felt they were part of my family," stated Mrs. Hexum. I want to thank her for handling her job as adviser with dedication. It was her first year as was it the first year for many staff members. However, we soon learned to work together. What we lacked in experience was made up in the staff's willingness to learn and produce a quality yearbook.

I hope all of you will treasure this keepsake and that it will provide you with future moments of enjoyment.

Oracle staff helpers Pamm Degrio, Theresa Walczynski, and Paula Danielson work hard on their pages for the next deadline. They are not full-time staff members, but they contribute valuable time and energy.

Mission accomplished. Oracle salespersons, also known as representatives, sold yearbooks in their homerooms. The collection of money and the handing out of receipts proved to be a complicated task.

Jonny,

Well, we are finally done with school!
So, now we can relax right? Now don't party too much. (But I know you will!) Have a great, great summer & future. Take Care!

867-5309! Hey hoser, Boy has this been a super year, most of the time when you were here! you little skipper! ^{Ha} ^{Ha} Have a super time in the army and please try to stay in touch. You've been a good friend. Oh, I still haven't gotten my Bob & Doug tapes back yet, so take off eh! 'no, you can keep it! We've had some good, funny, out-a-mind times, if ya know what I mean! Be good & whatever else!
